148 SAVED REACH NEW YORK

Survivors Relate Harrowing Tales of Battle Against Sea and Sharks

Harrowing tales of panic, suffering and death at sea, mingled with both blame and praise for captain and crew, were told by 148 survivors of the sunken Vestris who landed today at two New York piers.

Filled with most of the women and children, survivors said, the first lifeboat that was lowered crashed against the ship's side and flung all into the boiling waves.

The second boat put off with a huge hole in its side.

The liner sank with 200 still aboard. Many swam to lifeboats and the rest drowned like rats.

Investigation of the disaster by United States authorities will begin in New York tomorrow.

In grim silence crowds waited for the rescued as the North German Lloyd liner Berlin docked at Pier 42, North river, with 23 survivors and one body, and the Shipping Board vessel American Shipper moored at Pier 7 with 125.

There were scores of relatives and friends in the throngs, but many were there in vain.

Pioneers in Old Age
What Is a Bigot?
One Baby Octopus
More Brokers; Tickers

—By Arthur Brisbane—

Copyright, 1928, by Star Co.

AMONG THOSE wrecked on the ship Vestris 400 miles from shore were Mr. and Mrs Louis Leuhaser, both past middle age, traveling third class, taking every dollar they had to begin life again in the Argentine.

This is the courage that has built up our western country, particularly the Pacific Coast Old people go there with their money, and descriptions they send back bring out the young people.

Professor Bowman, of the Department of Economics in Columbia University, says this country "boasts of its religious freedom" and is cursed with bigotry It is, and will be for some time.

There are Protestant bigots, Catholic bigots, Jewish bigots, each kind despising the other religions and some times making it clear.

For good measure there are Christian Scientists that think all three religions need improvement.

A man is a "bigot" in the eyes of other religions when he takes his own religion too seriously.

Even Uncle Sam doesn't realize how big a country he owns, or what its prosperity is destined to be.

A few years ago there was much excitement because "the octopus, Standard Oil," had run up in value to a thousand millions Something must be done and WAS done.

The octopus was cut into tle pieces. One piece lives in New York, one in New Jersey, one in Indiana, one in California. And lots of other pieces without the name Standard Oil belong to the S. O. Octopus family.

Now an item of financial news tells you that one of the baby octopuses, Mr. Teagle's Standard Oil of New Jersey, earned between $90,000,000 and $100,000,000 profit last year.

The country that was afraid of a billion-dollar octopus now has a baby octopus earning 9 or 10 per cent. on a billion, all by itself, and thinks nothing of it

Big General Motors runs to many billions. A billion, no longer a scarecrow, is merely a unit of value.

Again "wild trading rush resumed in Wall Street."

Brokers can scarcely handle the business, tickers cannot handle it.

Why not add 600 seats to the Exchange? That would only make 1200 active members. Five hundred of the existing 1100 simply own their seats, and don't trade on the Exchange.

Sell new seats for $500,000 each, as the demand arises for them at that price. Divide the money, as is only just, pro rata among present owners of the seats.

Then divide stocks into various classes, fast and slow, and run them on two tickers

Each office would have two tickers and each little speculator could watch his own tape There could be an active ticker and a dull ticker. And when an active stock turned dull it could be switched to the other ticker and the public notified.

The saddest sight reported in regions devastated by the lava flood from Mt. Etna is a father and mother carrying their dead baby to a strange cemetery Their plot in their own graveyard was covered by lava 200 feet deep.

The poor couple grieved because this baby could not be buried there, and wondered how those already buried could get out through the lava.

Divine mercy and the Angel Gabriel, fortunately, will attend to that.

New York will undertake seriously "to curb grafting in

WOMEN AND BABIES DIE IN LEAKY BOATS, AVER SURVIVORS OF TRAGEDY

New York, Nov. 14—Survivors of the steamship Vestris' disaster said today that of the first three lifeboats put off from the sinking liner two sank and one capsized. The passengers in all three of these boats were mostly women and children.

While the launching of the boats was in progress the Vestris turned over in the water and panic-stricken passengers climbed from the water upon the keel, clinging there until the hulk sank.

These grim facts were brought to port today by the passengers and seamen who were snatched from death by the North German Llody liner Berlin and other rescue ships

It was the old order of the sea—"women and children first"—that cost so many lives among the women and children on the liner. And it was the irony of fate that the order which

New York, Nov. 14 (INS)—Hoping against hope that his honeymoon of three m[illegible] in a sea tragedy with the sinking of the [illegible] Melrose, M[illegible] banker, today stormed the offices of Lamport & Holt, owners of the ill-fated vessel, for news of his bride, who is among the missing

Stevens, representing the National City Bank in Buenos Aires, married a wealthy Argentine girl and was returning on the Vestris with his bride to South America after a honeymoon to his home in Boston.

Friends who met him at Pier No 7 in the North river where the American Shipper docked with many of the survivors, endeavored to take him to their home, but he broke away and took a taxicab to the Shippers' offices.

"Things on that boat were a little less than criminal," he declared. "The ship had a list when we started out of New York. Then came the storm and the end.

"There was no panic on the boat. While some of the little children

'NO, YOU JUMP,' LAST WORDS OF CAPT. CAREY

New York, Nov. 14 (AP)—The last words of Capt. W. J. Carey of the Vestris were:

"Hell, no! You jump!"

They were brought to New York today by Alfred Duncan of Liverpool one of the Vestris stewards arriving in New York on the Berlin

He and the captain, he said, were the last to leave the ship

"We stood by the railing," he said, "and all the lifeboats had gone, we were the last to jump.

"'Jump,' he said.

"'You'd better jump too,' I said. lin.

"'Hell, no! You jump!' he said.

"I jumped then, and I think he jumped after me. But I never saw him again.

The steward jumped just before the ship made her death plunge and saw no more of the master.

Sunday Behavior

If It Is Everything It Should Be Sunday Baseball Is Here to STAY

A young reader living in the city of Haverhill advises us that certain opponents of Sunday baseball in his community have given notice of an intention to oppose the granting of Sunday afternoon permits in that city by the incoming City Council.

Our young friend wants to know what WE think of THAT, and we have no hesitancy in saying to him that we think it perfectly all right.

Haverhill voted in favor of Sunday games by a majority of proportions. Under the circumstances, we should expect the City Council to accept the new law.

We believe in majority rule, of course, but at the same time we believe in respecting the rights—and not only the rights but the feelings—of the minority.

When the question of accepting the Sunday sport law comes before City Councils in January, the opposition—if any—should receive a polite and attentive hearing.

Those who favored Sunday games in last week's referendum can well afford to be generous. Here in Boston, they were in the majority by 118,584. That there will be Sunday baseball on Braves Field and in Fenway Park next summer can be taken for granted. The latest figures for the State that have come to our attention are "Yes," 577,353; "No," 304,738.

The towns of the Commonwealth have this advantage, in respect to this law as in other matters, that they will decide the Sunday games question by popular vote, in Town Meeting. Residents of the cities, on the other hand, must act through their representatives in Council. If opposition develops, the HONEST representative will want to hear it.

It occurs to us at this time to say a word of WARNING to our friends who have supported Sunday games with such enthusiasm, and especially to our YOUNGER friends.

PLEASE bear in mind that in this Sunday baseball venture we are all of us on trial.

Every one of us should consider himself a member of the Committee on Order and Decorum, beginning with the first day of Sunday ball.

Umpire-baiting, player-baiting, missile-throwing, and foul language must not be tolerated.

Remember that many of the finest men and women in Massachusetts OPPOSED these games. In a vote of all the citizens of the Commonwealth, they have been defeated; but if any over-smart young fellow thinks to rub that defeat in, we must be quick to discourage him. The thing to do is so to conduct these contests as to make our recent opponents ashamed of their opposition.

Always remember, too, that that which has been given can also be taken away. The Boston Evening American, which has championed Sunday afternoon sports since the question was first suggested, has a feeling that the friends of the game realize the situation and will see to it that, except perhaps for the size of the crowds, the Sunday game will attract no more censorious attention than games on any other day.

If, however, the Sunday game SHOULD get out of hand, and if Sunday crowds AS A RULE should so conduct themselves as to justify the expressed fears of the Lord's Day League and its associates, this newspaper feels bound to say that it will fight as vigorously for the REPEAL of the Sunday games law as it has labored for its adoption.

Knowing the game and its supporters, and knowing something of the temper of public gatherings in Massachusetts, we have NO fear that anything like this will come to pass. But we want this WARNING on the record.

The Twelfth Annual Rollcall

One of the most gratifying duties the procession of the months brings to the editorial desk is to call attention to the annual rollcall of the American Red Cross.

The Red Cross is the recognized agent of mercy of the people of the United States.

The head of the organization is the President of the Nation, who has issued an appeal, in which he says:

> "We have tested the Red Cross in war and peace. It has never failed us. It never will so long as it holds your support. As President of the United States and as President of the American Red Cross, I earnestly ask all our citizens to renew their membership in this Legion of Mercy."

The organization knows no frontiers, bows to no prejudices. It is first on the scene wherever disaster brings suffering and distress.

This year's goal is 5,000,000 members. If the canvass by volunteer workers fails to reach you before Thanksgiving Day, you will be glad to know that the address of the Boston Metropolitan Chapter is 45 Newbury Street.

If you are already a member, now is the time to renew your membership.

If you are not a member, now is the time to join.

All that is asked is YOUR NAME AND ONE DOLLAR.

The First Locomotive

Parts of the John Stevens Original to Be Put on Exhibition

The Smithsonian Institution has shipped to the Stevens Institute of Technology in Hoboken the original boiler and safety-valve of the John Stevens locomotive, the first locomotive successfully operated in America. It is to be exhibited at the inauguration of Doctor Harvey N. Davis as president of the Institute. Colonel John Stevens, who has been called the "Father of American Railroading," first operated the locomotive in 1825 on a circular wooden track, on his estate, at Castle Point, Hoboken. The greater part of this estate is now included in the campus of Stevens Institute.

The national museum has also a model of the original locomotive, the granddaddy of all American-built locomotives.

Colonel Stevens built his locomotive to demonstrate the practicality of a railroad project which he had incorporated two years earlier as the Pennsylvania Railroad Company. He also undertook to prove that steam locomotives could be operated on rails over ground with grades as well as on level ground. The success of his experiment forecast the development of railroads in America for freight and passenger transportation by steam power.

Vim Vigor Victory

How many times did Caesar flunk?
How many times was Nelson sunk?
When they were thrashed, did they get drunk?
And quite the struggle in a funk?
The strongest men have known defeat,
The mightiest sometimes retreat.
It's only when a fighter's pressed
That courage gets its final test.
Turn back again and do your best,
What if your last attempt was messed?
Who dares assert your course is run?
The game has only just begun.
There'll be another deal, my son,
And after that, another one.

New York Day by Day

by O.O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, Nov. 13—The profession of hotel hostess is attracting many girl graduates of exclusive schools. It has none of the rough and tumble hurrah of the jazz cafe or night club. The toney hotel has come to realize banishing loneliness among patrons pays.

The tactful hostess who can single out the lonely and make them feel they are something other than a number on the rack is doing something that cannot be valued in dollars. This goodwill feature is not new but in the modern rush was neglected.

Such efforts among people of refinement requires perception and tact. It is accomplished chiefly in those hotels seeking to achieve a "family atmosphere." And among the summer and winter inns around New York. The job pays from $50 to $150 a week and food and lodging.

The hostess in the aristocratic hotel has living quarters of the best. She must entertain now and then with familiar dinner parties away from public dining rooms. Her expense account for such entertaining is practically unlimited.

She must be adept in bringing congenial people together, promote bridge tournaments and see that wall flowers are supplied with partners in the ballroom dances. In many instances they have quite innocently enough performed the duties of a matchmaker.

Consequently the post requires those finished in social graces and for which hotel managements are willing to pay quite handsomely. Any number of hotels attribute their success largely to the popularity of hostesses and several are under long term contracts.

IN a New York paper this morning I saw a want ad for services of a tinner. Somehow I did not think there were any tinners in the big town. A good tinner had one of the crack jobs in a small town and rode around in a red wheeled buggy on Sunday. Ofter with one foot hanging rakishly over the sideboard—the durn slicker.

THE recent subway disaster in Times sq. created a "subway complex"—a pronounced phobia for underground travel. Yet the subway's record is singularly remarkable for safety. There is in operation 124 miles of subway tunnels and 620 miles of subway tracks, but this was the only great disaster. If a train stops between stations these days, as it frequently does, there is a formenting hysteria.

AN English engineer once referred to New York's "switchboard brain." The stranger is impressed with its underground mechanics and overhead freedom. All wires in the metropolis are below the surface and here beneath the sidewalks are the city's voice and nervous system. There is a vast and complicated network—valves, switches, push buttons, cables, telegraph and power wires, pneumatic tubes, transit tunnels, huge sewers and pipe lines for gas and steam. They dig foundations from under skyscrapers while propping them up on stilts and New York achieves more structural wonders above than beneath. But the public never sees them.

THESE underneath marvels are chiefly why New York is always torn up to resemble a shell-scarred battlefield and after you live here awhile—(Voice there is a train leaving every minute)—it gets pretty monotonous.

ANOTHER thing an imported small towner misses here is the gasoline filling station. There are some but comparatively few. The New Yorker is supplied at garages. And thus does the city miss the friendly courtesy of what the outland has found to be about the most polite of all employes meeting the public. They are information bureaus for tourists and rarely accept tips. For with most companies that means instant dismissal.

THE newest in male underthings is displayed in a smart haberdashery—athletic designs of sheer silks in hootchy-kootchy pinks, baby blues and lavenders with the replica of the owner's signature monogrammed thereon. And for one who just climbed out of long sleeved and long legged scratchy underwear two years ago, they are going to be pretty hard to work up to.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

A LITTLE girl stood crying at a country station in South Carolina. She had just said goodby to her lover, who was leaving on the Overland train. They had come to the station in a little, cut-down flivver that matched their simple, shabby clothes, and for a moment they had kissed and clung while the rest of us turned away with a sudden choke in our throats. Now the train was pulling out and she was watching, her frantic young heart in her eyes.

And I thought of all the wives and mothers and sweethearts who had watched with aching hearts while their dear ones went from them on pack horses and trains, in covered wagons and aeroplanes and ships.

And how out of that heartache and loneliness and high courage our country had been born.

I have been traveling around our country for the last two months. I have been seeing its great buildings, its stores and its mansions, its theaters and factories, its rich farming lands and crowded waterways, its mines and dams, its hangars and warehouses and ports—all the infinite wealth of a great nation. And of all that wealth I found our richest treasure, not in buildings and banks, but in the tear-filled eyes of a little girl at a station.

The greatest treasure is love.

America is a rich nation and a powerful one, but the hidden source of its strength lies not in riches or power, but in simple human love. The love of a man for a woman, the love of a woman for a man, the love of both for home and child. That is the great sight in America today—from that comes all romance and daventure, all progress and prosperity.

The more I travel the more I see love at work.

I see it peopling lonely farms in Texas—

And section cars on the desert—

I see it building great play parks in Chicago, settlement houses in St. Louis, public baths in San Francisco—

I see it lighting dugouts in Nebraska and flaming from palaces on Riverside drive—

I see it bargaining for vegetables by the Ghetto street stands of New York, washing the white marble stoops of Philadelphia's little red brick houses, whispering its sweet vows in the shadow of the White House, toiling in great steel mills of Pittsburgh, sweat streaming down bared torsos.

Everywhere in America I see love at work bracing itself for adventure, dreaming its dreams, spreading its frontiers—BUILDING A NATION.

Perhaps some day life will give that little girl in South Carolina riches and fame, but it will never give her a rarer lovelier thing than that which burned in her eyes today—for in love she has found life's noblest treasure.

SHIFTING CARGO CAUSED FATAL LEAK, SAYS VESTRIS CREW MAN

ON BRIDGE DURING RESCUE WORK

tention to me," Carey told Duncan as the two stood on the bridge after the skipper had given the age-old order of "women and children first."

Duncan obeyed his chief and put on the belt. The sea was then washing a third of the deck and the Vestris was rolling over on her starboard beam.

"I jumped," said Duncan. "I don't know what happened to him. The ship flopped over on her side and lay there a minute. Then she slowly disappeared."

Last Saturday's storm, Duncan continued, battered in a half door on the side of the Vestris, flooding the coal bunkers and stopping the engines.

Early Sunday morning she began to list and the crew was ordered to bail with buckets. That seemed ridiculous to Duncan, but everybody obeyed the orders of the master.

Passengers did not know just what the trouble was until almost the last minute, Duncan's story resumed. The captain ordered everyone on the boat deck. It was then apparent that the ship was sinking, and the order "Take to the boats," was issued

FALLING BOOM KILLED BABY IN ARMS OF FATHER

These departed with heads bowed after their fears were confirmed that their kin were among the 108 now listed as dead in the sea tragedy.

Once the rescued landed, the scene became one of hugging, kissing, weeping humanity.

Lifeboats leaked and the occupants were waist-deep, according to some survivors.

Bodies supported by lifebelts floated on all sides.

Wives saw their husbands sink beside already overcrowded boats whose occupants could not afford to lend a hand.

One man went down, came up with one arm missing, and sank again to his death. A Gulf stream shark had attacked him.

The S O S calls were not sent out soon enough, and the boats were not launched until it was too late, many of the rescued charged. Others heaped praise on Capt. Carey.

The Vestris listed all day Sunday, the day before she sank, and the crew pumped feverishly while thunder roared and lightning flashed, one survivor said.

Captain Goes to Death Despite Plea to Escape

Another added that the pumps did not work well, the scuppers were plugged and the bulkhead doors were not water-tight.

Wan and unkempt and wearing borrowed clothing, the survivors came ashore.

The bereaved—having lost wives or husbands or other members of their families—were still in a daze as they talked, but they eagerly added to the tales of the others and threw the spotlight's glare for the first time full on the disaster.

Archibald Bannister, boatswain's mate, declared that the sudden shifting of the cargo in stormy weather was responsible for a leak that tipped the ship over on its beam ends and made it necessary for the 129 passengers and 199 of the crew to abandon ship.

There was considerable difference as to the cause, but all spoke of a leak that let the sea pour into the starboard side.

Capt. William J. Carey of the Vestris is dead. That was established by some of those who were landed today by the Berlin. And he died in complete accord with the ancient code of the sea.

"Get on your lifebelt; don't mind me," he told a steward, Alfred Duncan of Liverpool.

They stood by the railing. All the boats had gone. The Vestris was rolling under.

"You better jump, sir," said Duncan.

13 of Bodies Recovered; Hunt for Others Goes on

"Hell, no; you jump," replied Capt. Carey.

He never spoke again unless it was to his God and the expanse of ocean and sky about him. The steward jumped, leaving the captain behind him.

Another member of the crew saw the captain in the water later—without a lifebelt on. He saw the captain sink beneath the waves.

The radioman, Michael J. O'Loughlin, is also believed to have gone down with the ship.

The number of survivors, including those brought in by the American Shipper and the Berlin and those who will land later on other vessels, is now placed at 220.

Only 13 bodies of the 108 believed dead have been recovered. Twelve bodies are on the way to port aboard Navy and Coast Guard vessels which, with the battleship Wyoming, cruised for hours today over the grave of the Vestris. One body was brought to New York on the liner Berlin.

The search for bodies is still going on. The hunt for more survivors was definitely set down as hopeless early today.

Admiral Hughes at Washington, and other naval officers were authority for the statement that all the missing undoubtedly were dead.

The U. S. S. Wyoming, which has eight survivors aboard, was ordered to leave the scene of the disaster at dusk for Norfolk, Va., to land them, probably tomorrow morning.

The Coast Guard destroyers Manning and Shaw and the cutters Mascoutin and Modoc will search for bodies for at least two days, according to Coast Guard chiefs.

The French oil tanker Myriam is steaming toward Hoboken with 64 survivors and is due to dock tonight.

Believe That Small Leak Expanded to Doom Ship

Many of the survivors thought that a small leak had gradually grown larger in the storm and severe gale.

The S O S was not sent out until 24 hours after the first listing of the vessel began, it was said.

No answer to the criticism will be given until those involved have rested and are able to answer questions by company officials, Vice-President David Cook of the Lamport & Holt line, owners of the sunken steamer, said.

If assistance had been called a day earlier ships would have been standing by when the Vestris' lifeboats were lowered, and no lives would have been lost, it was declared by survivors.

At least two persons, a man passenger and a stewardess were rescued after being in the water for nearly 24 hours. With lifebelts on, they kept a precious hold on wreckage.

These two were P. A. Dana, a Radio Corporation official, and Mrs. Clara Ball. It was to them that Capt. Schuyler Cummings of the American Shipper, which saved them, referred when he said, "The two pluckiest people I ever met."

Dana had been hurtled from a lifeboat in collision with another.

He saw women and children go down after clinging desperately to the overturned craft. He was swept away, but finally swam to the boat and with other men tried to right it. A woman's body floated out from underneath it.

Dana swam to some wreckage and found Mrs. Ball nearby.

Mrs. Earl Devore saw her husband, an auto racing driver, sink as she vainly tried to induce occupants of her boat to give him a hand. The boat was too crowded already.

The Vestris sank when only about 80 of its passengers and crew—numbering 328—had got away in boats.

Two boatloads of women and children had been hurled into the sea. Most of these died.

Men and women were leaping from the liner's sides. Some swam to safety. Others were sucked down.

The first two boats were filled with women and children, but when the crew started to lower away, the sinking liner lurched, the boats crashed against its side and the occupants were tossed into the waves.

When time finally came to lower the lifeboats the tackle was found to be faulty. It took hours to lower them.

The first one crashed, spilling the women and children it contained into the sea, while the second one was stove in and took off from the ship with a gaping hole in its side.

The occupants of this boat bailed all night. They were seen by the occupant of one of the other boats sitting in water up to their waists.

The ship sank when more than 200 were still on her. These flung themselves into the sea. Many found empty boats that had wrenched loose from the Vestris when it foundered.

More of the crew were saved than of passengers and withstood the hardships better.

Six boats kept close together until near midnight when a storm separated them. One, containing among others T. E. Mack, a construction engineer, who arrived on the Berlin, was rowed toward searchlights of the rescue vessels but, although they came under the bow of a tanker, they could not make themselves heard.

They were picked up at daylight by the Berlin.

Mack told of bodies floating on the water supported by lifebelts. Every boat was overcrowded, he said.

Pitiful Scenes on Dock in Search for Loved Ones

While survivors were landing from the liner Berlin today and telling their stories, an aged women circulated among them on the pier and turned away, with the remark, which many overheard:

"It's no use. I'm sure my poor brother is lost."

She was only one of many who left the pier in this mood. Others left, hopeful of finding their kin on the Myriam, due to arrive tonight.

Many of the disappointed ones refused to leave the pier. They would not be consoled. Told that there was nothing for them to stay for, they replied there was nothing for them to leave for. The sea had robbed them of their zest for life.

CAPTAIN AND SUBORDINATES SCORED BY SURVIVORS

The report that a sea valve had burst was "spiked" by Avard Adams, chief engineer, who said:

"I don't know what happened because I was in the engine room, but I will say this—there was nothing wrong with the sea valve. I believe the cargo shifted, but that's outside my province, you see. What happened is a mystery, but it will come out."

While some survivors were uttering words of praise for the crew, S. F. Puppe of Brooklyn charged that the seamen took the best boats.

"I put my wife and seven-months-old baby daughter into a lifeboat that they were filling with women and children," he said. "I wish I had kept them with me. I never saw them again.

"But I had to put them into that boat with main force. The crew offered no assistance and were rushing for lifeboats themselves. The crew took the best and left the leaky ones for the passengers.

"The lifeboat I was in had kegs full of salt water instead of fresh. There was absolutely no command of the ship after she began to sink. There was no panic. The crew merely did everything to save themselves. Our flares were wet and useless."

The passage of the two rescue ships through quarantine was speeded up by a large force from the U. S. Public Health Service.

Considerable excitement prevailed on the piers as the ships approached, but there was little need for the large details of policemen who were on hand.

The sadness of those who waited was intensified by the realization that many of those who would come ashore had lost their loved ones. The code of the sea, which places women and children first, had necessarily separated husbands and wives, and in most instances, it seemed, either husband or wife had been lost while the other survived.

The suffering of the survivors, both physical and mental, was written plainly on their faces as they landed.

Hotel rooms had been provided for those who had no homes in the vicinity of New York and doctors and nurses were at the piers to give treatment where needed.

One man who arrived on the Berlin knew that his wife would arrive later on the Myriam, but he was an exception. Exchange of radio messages had assured each of the other's safety.

Not a life would have been lost, passengers said, had the boats been launched before the ship listed so badly to starboard. As it was, with the sharp angle, every life was endangered when the descent into a life craft was made.

Even hand buckets were used to stay the rising water inside the hull of the Vestris, according to some of the rescued, who declared that the pumps did not work well.

Women and children were given precedence, it was said, but of 37 women aboard only 10 are known to have been saved. And of 13 children not one was rescued, so far as is known at the present time.

Alfred Duncan, second steward was the outstanding hero in the eyes of Carlos Quiros, chancellor of the Argentine consulate-general, who came shore on the Berlin.

Quiros said that five third-class passengers took a lifeboat all to themselves in their haste to get away.

Two boats were filled with passengers but could not be lowered. The occupants had to scramble out and seek places in other crowded boats.

E. J. Marvin of Montclair, N. J., a representative of the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey, said the responsibi'ity would rest with Capt. Carey. Mr. Marvin said the skipper had been derelict in not summoning aid 24 hours earlier.

Marvin also declared that had the lifeboats been sound and properly launched there would have been no loss of life, since the water, though rough from a recent storm, was warm. But he said the sea was at

Tanker Myriam With 64 Survivors to Dock Tonight

New York, Nov. 14 (AP)—Lamport & Holt agents here were informed today that the French tanker Myriam, with 64 rescued survivors of the steamship Vestris, will dock about 10 o'clock tonight in Hoboken.

'Criminal Neglect,' Says Capt. Sorenson of Wreck

New York, Nov. 14 (AP)—Capt. Frederick Sorenson, a passenger on the Vestris, who holds a master's license, was particularly bitter in his criticism of what he called the "criminal neglect" which he said marked the disaster.

"I know about ships," he said. "The reason the vessel foundered is criminal neglect. The captain did everything wrong. He should have had ships standing by us long before he did. Not a passenger should have been sent overboard before other vessels were standing by."

The American Shipper of the American Merchant line was the first of the rescue ships which saved the survivors of the Vestris to reach port with the victims of the sea tragedy. She arrived in New York this morning from the scene of the disaster with 125 survivors, docking at pier 7, where there were many pathetic scenes enacted. The pier had been crowded for hours with people anxiously awaiting her arrival.

Vincento Murri of Philadelphia is missing and Gaetano Abbadini of Philadelphia was among the survivors on the liner Berlin.

LAYS VESTRIS DISASTER TO INEXPERIENCE

By CARLOS QUIROS

Chancellor of the Argentine Consulate in New York, a Passenger on the Vestris.

(By Radio to the Associated Press)

S. S. Berlin, Nov. 14—My impression of the Vestris tragedy is that it was due to lack of experience, or excess of optimism or both.

Starting Saturday, we met a light storm resulting in a right side list which was gradually accentuating until it was 30 degrees. At that time any person of common sense would realize the impossibility of avoiding disaster. I would like to know what time the SOS order was given. The Berlin got it 150 miles off Nantucket. Due to the Berlin's distance from the wreck it lost time.

LAUDS VESTRIS CREW

The survivors got a hearty reception from Capt. von Thuslen of the Berlin and his crew, who deserve all praise. The Vestris' crew was fine. The captain, with a worried expression, was calm in giving orders from the hurricane deck. Impress on everybody that the only trouble was inexperience in handling the boats.

Some were too crowded. Men and women occupying them were compelled to jump into the water, for the crew was unable to release them from the davits. The good chief engineer shut down all but the dynamo engines early Monday, so avoiding killing everybody (by boilers bursting?).

The second steward went into the water advising what should be done, a thing that was very praiseworthy.

The passengers of the Vestris were fine, not realizing the seriousness of the situation until they were in the water. Then women were crying and their faces showed terror and sorrow for ones that passed away.

I firmly believe that similar accidents should not cost a single life or a piece of baggage. There was plenty of time to avoid loss of either.

In Pajamas, Use Hats to Bail Sinking Boat

New York, Nov. 14 (AP)—Conrad S. Slaughter, an auditor of the International Harvester Company, was probably the only smiling passenger in the group brought in by the American Shipper. At Quarantine he had learned that his wife was safe aboard the French tanker Myriam.

Slaughter also criticized Capt. Carey for being "too slow" in sending on the SOS and for waiting too long to lower the boats.

Mr. and Mrs. Slaughter were on the port side of the Vestris as she was sinking. As the water engulfed them they were parted. When Slaughter next saw his wife she was a hundred yards away, and when he tried to swim to her he could not find her.

George De Vale of Brazil said the loss of life was caused partly by failure to unfasten the lifeboats in preparation for abandoning the ship.

"We let the women get on board first," he related, "but many of the crew also got into the first boats. No officer was in charge of my boat. We had a hard time getting away from the Vestris. Then when we did get away we could do nothing because we had no oars.

"It was dark and rainy and we could see the lights of a rescuing ship. We shouted but it did not help. Finally the American Shipper found us. We bailed water with our hats to keep our boat afloat in the meanwhile. I was nearly dead when I was picked up. All I had on was my pajamas."

William W. Davies, American correspondent of La Nacion, Buenos Aires, who was suffering from exposure when rescued by the American Shipper, recounted that he was invited to sit at Capt. Carey's table in the dining room Saturday night. The captain, he said, never appeared.

"He may have been working," Davies added. "At any rate, I didn't see him until the last moment."

ORDERED TO N.Y. WITH 7 BODIES

New London, Ct., Nov. 14 (AP)—The destroyer Tucker was ordered at noon today to proceed to New York with the seven bodies picked up by coast guard boats from the wreck of the steamer Vestris. Two of the bodies have been identified, one as that of Jose G. Rua of New Bedford, and the other Raymond G. Pelal of 521 Bank st., New York.

Up until noon the Tucker had picked up four bodies, the Acushnet had picked up three, and the Davis and Shaw were still cruising in the vicinity of the wreck.

'NORM' BATTEN MAY BE LOST

Indianapolis, Nov. 14 (AP)—The automobile racing feats of Norman K. Batten and Earl Devore, who are among those missing in the sinking of the liner Vestris, will live long in the memories of the fans who follow the knights of the roaring road.

Not one of the 135,000 persons who attended teh annual 500-mile race here in 1927 likely ever will forget Batten's heroic handling of a flame-enveloped car as with burning hands and heat-seared body he guided it to safety. Capt. Edward V. Rickenbacker, war ace and now president of the Indianapolis Motor Speedway, said Battens' feat was the bravest he ever witnessed.

U. S. S. Wyoming Keeps Up Hunt for Sea Victims

Norfolk, Va., Nov. 14 (INS)—Under a pale new moon, 225 miles off Cape Henry, the big battleship Wyoming and three U. S. Coast Guard cutters patiently circled and zigzagged the rough waters of the Atlantic throughout the night, in the faint hope that some other lives may be saved from the wreck of the Vestris.

The Wyoming probably will give up the search today and put in for Norfolk.

The Coast Guard cutters will continue the search, however, after the Wyoming leaves. The Wyoming has eight survivors aboard, five women and three negro members of the crew.

CREW PICTURES GRIM TRAGEDY OF THE SEA

New York, Nov. 14 (AP)—Eighty-two members of the Vestris' crew, brought to port by the Berlin and the American Shipper, were resting this afternoon at the Seaman's Church Institute.

Ashore again after their experience with old ocean, they swapped grim stories about what happened aboard the steamer before she took the long plunge to the bottom of the Atlantic, and about what happened after the vessel's human cargo had been entrusted to the wind-blown gulf stream.

There were stories of boats that capsized, dumping women and children into the water; of sharks that sped here and there watching for—and getting, occasionally—a chance to strike; of perilous launching of lifeboats; of human beings who clung to flimsy bits of wreckage.

LEAPED JUST IN TIME.

Many of these men who make the sea their home were not talkative. There was Alfred Duncan, for instance, second steward. He didn't think he had much to say, but comrades said it for him, assuring the world that Duncan was a hero. He had not left the Vestris, they said, until two minutes before she sank, and when he did go it was to walk down the rakish deck, leap into the waves and swim to a lifeboat.

Duncan himself said:

"I went to the wireless room a few minutes before she sank to get a lifebelt. I didn't see the chief wireless man. I had seen him on deck a moment before. Capt. Carey walked down the listed side with me to the water's edge. He had no life belt. I don't know what he did."

Duncan said nothing about the service he had done to passengers and crew alike in helping launch the boats and in reassuring everybody.

WHEN 30 DIED

George Amsdell, the ship's storekeeper, was a hero, too, as his comrades saw it. He was in command of the lifeboat that was crushed by a falling davit.

Perhaps 30 women and children lost their lives in that smashing blow.

Amsdell's arm and shoulder were crushed and he lost consciousness. Supported by his lifebelt he floated until his senses returned and then he hailed lifeboat No. 6, which took him aboard. One arm dangled uselessly, but the storekeeper steered the craft without relief until she was picked up hours later.

George wasn't with the rest of the crew at the institute. He was lying on a comfortable hospital bed, to which he had been taken immediately upon arrival.

HE SAW THEM DIE.

Sailor Gill was on duty in lifeboat No. 6. Almost 30 women and children were in that lifeboat, he said.

"Finally a big wave washed us overboard and flooded us," he said. "We cut the falls then and drifted away. We were flooded with every wave. Finally two air tanks broke away and the boat capsized.

"Before that, two small children had been killed, and another had been washed overboard. One woman was drowned in the boat and crushed in the crowd.

"The boat turned over and over. I saw a raft 100 feet away. Pearman, one of the greasers, and I swam to it. We told three women, clinging to the edge of our lifeboat, to hang on, that we would try to swim back to them with the raft. We couldn't do it, though. The raft kept drifting away. Finally, we couldn't see the boat any more."

Warmth of Gulf Stream Saved Lives of Many

New York, Nov. 14 (INS)—Shipping men said this afternoon that there would probably have been greater loss of life in the Vestris disaster and graver danger of pneumonia to the survivors if the liner had not foundered in or in close proximity to the gulf stream.

It was pointed out that the gulf stream, which flows northward from the south, is about 20 degrees warmer than the water on both sides of it.

Two of Three Radio Operators Rescued

New York, Nov. 14 (INS)—Two of the three missing radio operators on the Vestris have been saved, according to a radio received here from the steamer Myriam, which is proceeding to New York with its quota of survivors.

The message read: "MacDonald and Bershere both on Myriam."

No mention was made of the third operator, M. J. O'Loughlin, who was at his key as the Vestris went down.

TRIPPI INDICTED FOR MURDER IN FIRST DEGREE

An indictment for first-degree murder was returned by a Suffolk grand jury today against Charles Trippi, Jr., who shot and killed Turnkey Fred Pfluger in State prison on Sunday last.

The convict is also named in two other indictments, one charging him with assault on Prison Officer John Connolly with intent to kill and for alleged assault with a dangerous weapon.

HIT ON HEAD

Connolly, according to prison officials, was struck on the head by Trippi with the gun which the prisoner used in shooting Pfluger to death in the prison chapel.

Trippi will probably be taken under heavy guard from the prison tomorrow to face arraignment on the three indictments, but no plans have yet been made public for his trial.

Pfluger, who was buried from his Arlington home today, was murdered by the 21-year-old desperado in an unsuccessful break for freedom from serving an 18-year sentence for robbery.

REVOLVER INQUIRY.

While Suffolk County prosecutors were asking for the murder indictment, police and penal authorities were attempting to solve the problem of the possession by Trippi of the revolver and 50 rounds of ammunition.

A former Boston police officer, recently employed at the prison as a guard, has been questioned in connection with the crime.

In the meantime, Sanford Bates, commissioner of correction, has barred all sightseers from the Charlestown institution, only those properly identified and having legitimate business there being allowed to enter.

Public Garden Swans Shriek in Protest at Being Moved

Passersby in the Public Garden today were treated to an unusual "hunt" when park department employes captured the nine swans that make their summer home on the garden pond. They were taken to their winter home at Franklin Park zoo.

Many feathers were lost in the scramble to catch the birds, and the piercing shrieks of the four black ones added to the general din.

For those who wondered at the silence of the five white birds, it may be explained they are "mutes" and incapable of voicing a protest.

HOOVER GAINS 569 IN HUB, ALLEN 189

A net gain of 1500 votes for Governor-elect Allen and of 2000 votes for Hoover in the Boston recount was predicted today by Herman Hormel, collector of the port, and others if the present ratio continues.

In the first 42 precincts counted at Faneuil Hall, Allen made a net gain of four and three-quarters votes to the precinct and Hoover 10 to the precinct, according to the first figures given out by election commissioners.

These figures show that Allen made a gross gain of 226 as compared to Gen. Charles H. Cole's gross gain of 37, giving Allen a net gain of 189.

The Hoover-Curtis electors made a gross gain of 296, and the Smith-Robinson electors a gross loss of 273, a net Hoover gain of 569.

Referring to the criticism of City Hall workers appearing at Faneuil Hall to check the recount, Hormel said they were used only in an emergency and others had been obtained to take their places today. The only City Hall officials at Faneuil Hall today were Charles H. Innes of the Park Commission, and Schoolhouse Commissioner James Myrick.

1¢ Sale Drug Store Needs

To be able to absolutely certify to the quality of hundreds of items in our Drug Department, we have them prepared to our specifications and packed under our famous "Beacon Hill" label.
In order to introduce these products to more people, we occasionally hold a One Cent Sale in which we offer these items one at the regular price and another of the same size and quality for one cent. If you already know the purity and efficacy of "Beacon Hill" drugs and medicines, take advantage of this sale to replenish your medicine chest. If you are not familiar with them, it will pay you to try them for yourself while they can be bought at such a saving.

ELIZABETH COTTON MORISON MAKES FORMAL CURTSY, SAYS BETTY ALDEN

Parents' Beacon Hill Residence Is Handsomely Decorated for Party

THE FASHIONABLES PASSED IN BENEATH STRIPED AWNINGS, yesterday, and so to the Horace Morison drawing rooms where amid old Venetian magnificence they formally met Miss Elizabeth Cotton Morison, this season's debutante of the family. Beacon Hill and the cobble-stoned Louisburg sq. region boast many an Early American parlor, filled with heirlooms. But nothing in that never-changing section of sky-reaching, old brick houses has an apartment more regal, in the manner of ancient Venice, than that in which Miss Morison had her debut.

THE WALLS ARE SOFTEST, DIMMEST GREEN SATIN BROCADE. Tall windows mask their slender height with dull gold hangings. Wall mirrors repeat endlessly the candle light from enormous antique standards. Mrs. Morison and Miss Morison received their friends before a mirrored background beautifully flanked by rhododendron sheaves, the leaves ingeniously done in silver. Of course the autumn touch, given by chrysanthemums, was there. And vivid fruits and gay miniature things from the garden lent their seasonal touch.

THE DEBUTANTE WORE A DREAM OF A FROCK. A SYMPHONY, perhaps it might be termed, since its dominant color notes were in harmony with the lovely, soft, rich Venetian green that appeared repeatedly in the decorative motif of the drawing room. Its mode might have been either of a long ago yesterday or a very much up to the moment today. Its grace was of any period. So was its coloring. Gold threads glinted through antique white gold brocade that was faintly splashed with rose and green. Its lines molded slenderly to the figure and about the shoulders green velvet achieved a distinctive scarf note with long, trailing ends.

MRS. MORISON OWNS THE MOST SUPERB COLLECTION OF costume jewelry. Carved jades and gleaming turquoises, glowing amber and deeply colored amethysts have been brought to her from all about the world, or been the fruit of her own shopping forages through bazaars and "quarters." For yesterday's super-important afternoon she chose some beautifully set topazes—golden deep and lovely in their gilt settings. With her handsome gown of rose velvet they were exquisite. The tint of rose, the faded pink of dried rose leaves, and the yellow of jewels and gilt were entirely harmonious.

HOT HOUSES MUST HAVE BEEN STRIPPED OF PINK ROSES for Miss Morison's debut. Hundreds of the fragrant beauties were sent in tribute. They made a wonderful warm splash of deep pink in the dining room, where Miss Marjorie Morrill, Miss Sally Parker and Miss Nancy Olive Morison, home from New York for sister's presentation, saw that dowagers had their tea and cakes and that debutantes did the proper thing as pourers. Miss Morrill's frock was rose beige. Miss Morison's was deep blue, and the family jewel box contributed some lovely costume pieces to enhance its glow. Miss Parker's frock was sombre velvet.

DEBUTANTES OF IMPORTANCE, DEBUTANTES OF PULCHRITUDE, interesting, merry debutantes were in the tea table coterie, nearly two dozen of the dears. The list is Miss Sally Sprague, Miss Winifred Thorndike, Miss Clarissa Mayo, Miss Margaret Cummings, Miss Rosamond Sears, Miss Florence Lindsey, Miss Abby Beveridge, Miss Phyllis Ellsworth, Miss Betty Battles, Miss Anna Walcott, Miss Rue Elizabeth French, Miss Mary Flagg, Miss Cora Lyman, Miss Elizabeth Scaif, Miss Eloise Weld, Miss Judith Chase, Miss Happy Gardiner, Miss Betty Emery, Miss Lydia Rotch and Miss Anne Sutton.

LEADERS IN SOCIETY SPORTING SET

Henry G. Vaughan, M. F. H., chats with Mrs. Louis Bader. Mr. Vaughan figures prominently in Norfolk's Hunts Set, as Master. Mrs. Bader was recently a hostess for luncheon after a run.

DECEMBER 10, FOR MISS MARJORIE MORRILL, IS AN PORTANT date. Just when winter's severity approaches Bos she sails away to the Riviera, where skies are eternally blue and t nis is a theme to hold enthralled national and international stars the net and racquet. Miss Morrill has several laurel leaves alrea a-gleam on her brow. She plays a dashing, smashing game, the sort that brings local and national honors and has before taken her across the seas to meet the stars that twinkle on the courts for other nations.

SHE AND HER MOTHER ARE VOYAGING TOGETHER AND WILL not see America again until some time in April, since tennis is the queen attraction all about the sun-drenched Mediterranean shore. And there may be an excursion into England. In fact, Miss Morrill is likely to play tennis most anywhere, and so of course is mightily thrilled at the prospect. And the social game is not to be ignored, either. Prominent international hostesses hasten to do honor to visiting players, so daytime brilliancy on the courts is duplicated by brilliancy by night, when electricity replaces the sun's blaze and tanned young people doff sports togs and get into after 6 o'clock regalia.

IT GOES WITHOUT SAYING THAT ARISTOCRATIC COGNOMENS will grace the Senior Supper Dance cards. Ronald Lyman and his corps, who sit in star chamber sessions on the "Who Is" and "Who Is Not" of the Supper Dance list, have the town's smartest young matrons for sponsors. Commencing with the super important "A" and proceeding to the elegant "W" the list is the very quintessence of quality as Boston knows it. Mrs. Harcourt Amory, Jr., has the honor of commencing the list, alphabetically, and Mrs. Oliver Wolcott closes it.

OTHERWISE, IT INCLUDES MRS. GEORGE RICHMOND FEARING, 3d, youthful beauty and mater to two golden haired children; Mrs. Gorham Brooks and Mrs. Francis H. Appleton, Jr., who can wear smart frocks with an air; Mrs. John Lawrence, perennially charming Mrs. Francis Bacon Lothrop, one of the Gordon Abbott daughters; Mrs. Herbert Jaques, dark eyed and dashing; Mrs. Richard Russell, a senior as well as junior supper dance arbiter; petite Mrs. George Saltonstall West, the tall and handsome Mrs. William Davis Sohier, Jr., Mrs. J. Lewis Bremer, handy with a tennis racquet; Mrs. Dudley Howe, bright cheeked, and the handsome Mrs. Ronald Lyman herself. Also Mrs. "Freddy" Church and Mrs. George von L. Meyer, Jr. Altogether as creamy a list as can be compiled in Boston.

5 GOVERNORS TO HELP OPEN NEW NORTH STATION

With five New England Governors and numerous other celebrities assembled in the east waiting room, the new North Station in Boston will be formally opened tonight when President Coolidge in Washington closes an electric circuit.

The electric impulse will light a monitor light in the east end of the waiting room, which will have been turned into a banquet hall for the night.

Thomas Nelson Perkins, chairman of the executive committee of the Boston & Maine, will be toastmaster, and there will be brief addresses by Governors Fuller of Massachusetts, Spaulding of New Hampshire, Brewster of Maine and Weeks of Vermont, Mayor Nichols, President John S. Lawrence of the New England Council, Homer Loring, former chairman of the board of directors of the railroad, who conceived the new terminal, and President George Hannauer, who is carrying it to completion.

OLD TIMERS' TABLE.

Governor Trumbull of Connecticut will also be at the speakers' table.

At a raised table will be a featured group, the "Old Timers," consisting of the Boston & Maine's oldest commuters, conductors and enginemen. The commuters are William D. Brackett of Stoneham, who has been using the B. & M. 64 years; Henry H. Savage of Wakefield who has ridden the trains for 62 years; Galen A. Parker of Reading and Charles H. Tuttle of Salem.

The honor enginemen are Charles Hamilton of Portland, 73 years old, 57 years in service; Warren E. Emerson of Concord, N. H., 74 years old, 60 years in service, and John G. Allison of Ayer, 77 years old, 57 years in service.

The honor conductors are R. H. Fuller of Wilmington, 72 years old, 54 years in service; George W. Knowlton of Somerville, 66 years old, 54 years in service, and Thomas T. Lyon of Marblehead, 78 years old, 60 years in service.

RECORD SPEED

The dedication takes place a year to a day after the Boston & Maine's first announcement of its terminal development plans, the work being done at record speed without interruption or mishap to 24,000,000 people passing through the structure.

The "unveiling" will reveal the station complete, with its waiting room, lined in soft-toned marble and balconied on three sides, running more than two-thirds the length of the building. The great concourse, unlike the old, is fully enclosed, heated and ventilated, the air being renewed 10 times every hour.

Like the waiting room it supplements, it is walled in marble on all sides. Upper walls and beamed ceiling are finished in soft-toned buff stucco. It is attractively lighted, with new metal gates and improved train announcement boards, constitution a revolution compared with the musty trainshed of the former station.

On a pedestal behind the speakers' table will be a huge frosted cake, four feet long, reproducing the new terminal. This cake is the work of Pastry Chef Ernest Boessinger of Hotel Brunswick.

SHOTS HALT 2 BOYS IN AUTO

A wild automobile chase through the streets of Newton in which several shots were fired by Motorcycle Officer James F. McHugh today resulted in the arrest of Robert J. Burns, 23, of Roseclair st., and Fred J. Bruno, 22, of Columbia rd., both of Dorchester, charged with using an auto without authority, driving under the influence and so as to endanger the public.

The car, the property of William J. O'Neill, Glover ave., Quincy, and reported as stolen November 13, was seen by Patrolman William Whelan of the Newton police. At the time it was going at a 60-mile clip. Whelan summoned Officer McHugh, who gave chase and fired two shots, one lodging in the rear fender.

Burns and Bruno will be arraigned in the Newton Court on November 22.

2 MOTHERS GET JAIL TERM; LYNN 'FOSTER DADDY' TO 4

Two mothers in Lynn court today were given jail sentences for keeping and exposing liquor for sale, and as a result the city will have to assume temporary care of four children of one of the women. She is Mrs. Mary Clements of Bond st., Lynn, whose husband, John, is serving three-months' sentence in Salem jail for a similar offense. Today Judge Reeve found her guilty, sentenced her to one month and revoked the suspension on a previous sentence. She will have to serve two months.

In the case of Mrs. Rose Greenspan of Blossom st., Lynn, also a mother, a two-months' sentence and $200 fine were imposed and the suspension on a previous two-months' sentence was revoked, making a total of four months. She appealed.

WINTHROP CHILD DIES FROM AUTO INJURIES

Paul Antonellin, four, of 36 Beal st., Winthrop, was killed in front of his home, when he was struck by an automobile operated by Edward H. Glucker of 131 Court rd., Winthrop. The child was taken to the Winthrop Community Hospital in the same automobile, but died shortly after arrival.

YOUTH DRINKS POISON IN BACK BAY HOTEL

Shouting that he had taken bichloride of mercury by mistake for a headache potion, Eugene C. Leo, 22, of Jordan ave., Brunswick, Me., rushed down to the lobby of the Copley Plaza today and begged that he be taken to a hospital.

The youth, clad only in pajamas and overcoat, was placed in a taxicab and rushed to City Hospital, where his name was placed on the danger list.

According to Sergt. Dennis Shea of the Back Bay police station, a note addressed to young Leo's mother was found on the dresser in his room, but police would not divulge the note's contents.

Leo registered at the hotel shortly after midnight. Five hours later he came running into the lobby.

WIFE IS FED UP ON DIPLOMATS

"My husband told me I should consider the fact he was a member of the diplomatic corps, of great value to me and appreciate it," said Mrs. Sarah E. de Almeida, testifying in Middlesex Probate Court today, where she was seeking a divorce from Pedro M. de Almeida, former Spanish consul at Boston.

Mrs. de Almeida is supervisor of nurses in the Lynn public schools.

She charges cruelty and neglect.

His wife, who is 35, while de Almeida is 56, was superintendent of nurses at the Thomas Hospital in Peabody at the time of their marriage on November 14, 1918, just 10 years ago today.

"He told me and my friends a nurse was a member of the servant class," she testified.

Mrs. de Almeida said she and her husband lived in three rooms in the attic of his parents' home on Main st., Somerville, and that she was constantly treated as an inferior.

The witness testified her husband used profanity, and when asked to give an example, wrote a word on a scrap of paper which she submitted to Judge John C. Leggat.

2 POLICE ACQUITTED IN BLINDING OF PRISONER

Assault and battery charges against Patrolmen Daniel Sullivan and William H. Long of Roxbury Crossing were dismissed today. Charges were brought by George Bridges of Wirth Lane, Roxbury, who alleged the officers beat him and gouged one eye out while arresting him on a chage of setting up and promoting a lottery.

Officers and witnesses testified Bridges attempted to escape after being arrested and that during the ensuing battle, Bridges held a weapon.

FIRE IN FLUE THRILLS CROWDS OF SHOPPERS

A fire in the grease flue on the fourth floor of the four-story brick building owned and occupied by Jackson's, confectioners, at 12 Winter st., this afternoon, tied up traffice and caused considerable excitement among shoppers.

The alarm was turned in from Hawley and Summer sts., causing the apparatus some confusion. Chemicals extinguished the blaze.

SAFE ROBBERS GET $150 IN 2 BRAINTREE PLANTS

Braintree police are searching today for burglars who ransacked two safes in South Braintree and escaped with a total of $150.

At the Woodson Coal Co., Crescent ave., $100 was taken and they garnered $50 at the Braintree Rubber Co. Police say that the noise of the explosions were muffled by the rumble of passing freight trains. A few finger prints were discovered and police are working on these as clues.

DEMOCRATIC ELECTOR ON TRIAL FOR FRAUD

Representative Felix Marcella, Democratic elector, went on trial in Municipal Court today charged with inducing Antonio Della Rocco to vote under the name of Genaro Melino in Precinct 2, Ward 3, at the election on November 6. At a previous hearing Della Rocco, charged jointly with violating the election laws, was acquitted.

CARDINAL AT INSTALLATION

Washington, Nov. 14—President Coolidge and Cardinal O'Connell were prominent figures today at the installation of Rt. Rev. Mgr. James Hugh Ryan, as rector of Catholic University at Washington, D. C.

It was the first time a president of the United States had been present at an official function of the university since President Cleveland attended the laying of the corner stone, according to Cardinal O'Connell.

Mgr. Ryan succeeds Bishop Thomas J. Shahan, a former Massachusetts man, who held the post since 1910 and still retains association with the university. Mgr. Ryan, who is 41, has a reputation as an able administrator and Cardinal O'Connell predicted he would develop the university in many ways.

LITTLE NEGRO OF VESTRIS CREW RESCUED 20 IN RAGING SEA

SWIMMING STAR, 14 HOURS IN WATER, REVEALS HERO

New York, Nov. 14 (AP)—A little Barbados negro, Lionel Licorice, a quartermaster on the Vestris, was hailed today as one of the outstanding heroes of the disaster.

Alfredo Ramos, young Argentine swimming star, who was rescued after swimming and floating for 14 hours, said the quartermaster saved 20 lives.

"That little negro did what the officers of the Vestris failed to do," said Ramos, who was rescued by the American Shipper.

"He took charge of boat No. 14, and not only saved the passengers but occasionally jumped out to catch an air or helpless passengers floating in the water. By the time the American Shipper picked up the boat he had saved 20 lives.

"I cannot say that the officers of the Vestris could be praised for their endeavors to save us. The quartermaster was the only member of the crew who exerted himself in our behalf."

Quartermaster Licorice sat unnoticed, swinging his legs on the rail of the American Shipper, until he was introduced to newspaper men by Ramos as a hero of the rescue.

How 'Shipper' Saved 125 From Death

New York, Nov. 14 (AP)—This is the story told today by Capt. Schuyler Cummings, master of the steamer American Shipper, which brought to port 41 passengers and 84 of the crew of the Vestris.

RESCUED MANY
Capt. Schuyler Cummings, commander of the American Shipper, who picked up survivors from the Vestris.

"On Monday, November 12, at 11:06 a. m.," he said, "we received an SOS from the Vestris and immediately changed our course to the southward and proceeded at utmost speed. Attempts were made to get the true position by the use of the radio compass, but signals became so weak that we could not get bearings. We, therefore, had to rely on the position given by the steamer Vestris and shore stations.

"We reached the position given by the Vestris at 10:30 p. m. and immediately sighted a white light, which shortly proved to be the masthead light of another searching steamer.

MEETS FIRST BOAT

"From 11:08 p. m. until 2 a. m. on November 13 we searched the area where the Vestris was supposed to have gone down, but not finding any wreckage we decided to extend our search further to the east and south, figuring that the drift of the current might have carried the lifeboats further east.

"This calculation fortunately proved to be correct, and at 3:40 a. m. we saw a flare from a lifeboat almost right ahead, and at 4:05 a. m. we came alongside a lifeboat from which we took 24 survivors. No other boats were in sight, but at 4:30 a. m. cries were heard and by using our searchlight we located a lifeboat, No. 1 of the Vestris, and rescued 19 persons.

"It appears that this boat had used up its flares and, therefore, could not signal its position. Shortly after another flare was seen toward which we proceeded at full speed, and at 5:15 a. m. arrived alongside lifeboat No. 3, saving all persons on board.

"From 5:30 a. m., until daybreak, about 6:30, nothing further was sighted, and then lifeboats Nos. 10 and 14, and by 7:30 we had taken aboard all the persons in these boats.

TWO IN LIFE BELTS

"At this time the radio communication with other searching vessels led us to believe that all the lifeboats which had got away from the Vestris were accounted for, so we decided to continue the search for a life raft or for survivors in life belts.

"At 9:46 we sighted two persons in the water in life preservers and we lowered our No. 2 lifeboat in charge of Second Officer Ohman. This boat succeeded with considerable difficulty in saving two persons, one of whom proved to be a woman, and, it appears, both these survivors had been in the water since the Vestris sank 24 hours before.

"In carrying out this rescue it was necessary to cast adrift our own lifeboat, as meantime the sea had greatly increased and there was a possibility of injury to our lifeboat's crew if we attempted to get it aboard."

FOUND NO OTHERS.

"During the rest of the forenoon we manoeuvred through the wreckage at slow speed searching it thoroughly for additional survivors, but finding none. The battleship Wyoming and the steamship Berlin also took part in the search.

At noon, in view of the fact that several other government vessels had arrived on the scene, and considering the large number of persons we had on board, some of whom required hospital treatment, I decided to abandon the search and to proceed to New York, where we arrived at 7:30 this morning."

108 BELIEVED DROWNED

Washington, Nov. 14 (INS)—With nine boats still futilely combing the seas in the vicinity of the Vestris disaster, the Coast Guard today abandoned hope of discovering any additional survivors of the sunken craft.

Some of the oldest officers of the rescue organization declared it was beyond possibility that, without food, and in the high seas any person could have lived through two days on the missing makeshift raft.

Headquarters declared the coast guard boats would probably continue their search two more days, after which all possibilities of rescue or of picking up bodies from the wreck will have been exhausted.

Jap Boat Ohio Maru Abandons the Search

New York, Nov. 14—The Japanese boat Ohio Maru, one of the first rescue craft to reach the scene of the sinking of the Vestris has abandoned its search for survivors after more than 24 hours search.

List of Victims Needing Service of Doctors

"The following is a list of the Vestris injured requiring hospital treatment:

Passengers—E. Keizer, amputation of the left hand; E. M. Walcott, fractured ribs; William W. Ulrich, fractured leg; W. W. Davies, acute bronchitis and shock; Miss Henrietta Cubbin, shock.

Crew—Henry Carpenter, fractured leg; George Amsdell, fractured arm; Jean Gladianes, severe lacerations of the hand; Reginald Bannister, lacerations of the foot; John Hogg, fracture of both arms; John Kewn, lacerations of the hands; Lorando Moore, stewardess, shock.

VICTIM SAYS 3 LIFEBOATS MET DISASTER

New York, Nov. 14 (AP)—Only four lifeboats were lowered from the Vestris, one survivor reported today. One of those was stove in while being lowered, and two others capsized, throwing their occupants into the water. A fifth boat broke away from the ship and many swimming passengers climbed into it.

George Santanna of New York also told the story of Capt. Carey's disappearance.

Santanna asserted he tried to reach three lifeboats but each denied him entrance. He couldn't swim and had put on a lifebelt before the ship sank.

"I found myself on the topside," he continued, "alone, save for Capt. Carey. He was wearing a heavy topcoat, but no lifebelt. The ship began sinking fast. You could feel her going down beneath you.

"Then we went down. It seemed a huge wave was pouring over us and the captain and I were in the water. We were drawn down by the suction. I came up and reached for a floating box.

"I didn't see the captain again. I don't know how long I floated, but finally I was picked up by lifeboat No. 5.

"I had been swimming after the boat for some time, but the negro members of the crew rowed away.

"Other people were begging to get aboard, too, but the negroes didn't seem to want any more aboard. But Chief Engineer Adams made them stop and we swam to it and were taken in."

Woman Is Called Real Heroine of Vestris Disaster

New York, Nov. 14 (AP)—The outstanding heroine of the wreck of the Vestris, in the opinion of Capt. Schuyler Cummings of one of the rescue ships, was the stewardess of the Vestris (Mrs. Ball), who was taken out of the water after having floated 20 hours.

She insisted that a man, who was in the water with her, be taken aboard the ship first, and when she got on board the steamer insisted that she was well enough to stand up.

Ship Searches in Vain

New York, Nov. 14 (INS)—The Grace liner Santa Barbara, which made an unsuccessful search for survivors of the Vestris, docked in Brooklyn today. The ship was due Monday.

SURVIVORS TELL THRILLING STORIES OF RESCUE AT SEA

'WOMEN AND CHILDREN FIRST' ORDER COST MANY LIVES

usually is the salvation of women and children should have brought them doom in the foundering of the Vestris.

The survivors on the Berlin brought a grewsome picture of the tragedy which followed the launching of the open boats. The passengers, while on shipboard and in the face of danger, remained calm. But panic followed the disaster to the lifeboats in the water.

As the rolling seas swamped and sank two of the boats and the other turned over keel up screams of agonized fear came from the water—filled with wreckage and struggling forms of women and children.

One after another the survivors told how, as the ship started to go down, the lifeboats were lowered, women and children being put in the first two launched. How they had scrambled into the other lifeboats. How those who could not get into a boat leaped into the raging sea. How they saw Capt. William Carey stand by his ship to the very end.

How they saw him go down to a watery grave. How disaster came upon the two boats that held the women and children, precipitating them to their death in the sea.

What stories they told!

Of a woman carrying a baby as she held to a piece of wreckage. How the baby was tossed high by a wave and catapulted into the sea. How men and women, swimming around in the water, pleaded with those in overloaded boats to take them in, and of the despairing cries as those who could not get in went down.

There were stories of the bravery of the crew. Of criticism of the officers. Why didn't they lower the boats sooner? That was one of the main complaints. Why was an S O S signal sent out Sunday and then cancelled only to be sent out crackling through the ether again? That was another.

Carlos Quiros, chancellor of the Argentine embassy, Washington, was strong in censure of the life saving operations of the sinking Vestris.

"I was astonished," said Quiros, "at the lack of discipline among the crew of the Vestris at the launching of the lifeboats. The work was slow and sloppy.

"One boat they got lowered had a big hole in it. The crew started nailing and patching it up. It sank within from 50 to 60 feet of the ship. All the boats were overloaded. Twenty-five persons in one was ample.

"I started to get in a boat which I think was No. 8. I got one foot in and saw it was overloaded so I stepped back and leaped into the sea."

Quiros was later picked up by lifeboat No. 13 after swimming in the sea for some time. There were 23 others in boat No. 13, he said.

While he swam about in the wreckage-filled sea Quiros said he saw many people swimming near him.

Feared Lost

BABY AND DAD

Joseph Rua of New Bedford and his two-year-old child are among the missing Vestris passengers. It is feared, too, Mrs. Rua has been drowned.

Women and Children Die as Boats Are Lowered

O. L. Maxey of Richmond, Va., a survivor on the Berlin, and other passengers also criticized the slowness of the crew in getting the open boats into the sea. They said it required two hours to lower four lifeboats.

"If the first S O S had been sent out the night before I believe there would have been no occasion for loss of life," said Maxey. "The seamen failed to hurry up the lifeboats and the whole thing moved without any precision."

The confusion and panic in the water after the three boats with their precious burdens of human life had been lost was heart-rending to the passengers still on board the sinking ship.

But the passengers left behind had terrors and dangers of their own to face, for the ship began to roll and pitch fearfully. Before the last of the small boats was cleared away it was struck amidships by a tremendous wave which rolled it over keel up.

The Vestris, waterlogged and helpless floated like the carcass of a huge dead whale, while the passengers and seamen tossing in the water tried to climb up the slippery bottom of the keel.

Fearing the ship would sink at any minute, they dived from the keel back into the water in an attempt to swim to the nearest boats or to keep themselves afloat with flotsam and jetsam until the rescue fleet could arrive on the scene.

Lower the Lifeboats

T. E. Mack, a construction engineer from Wyoming, who was on his way to Brazil with Maxey, gave a vivid description of the storm and difficulty experienced in lowering the boats.

"The hurricane," he said, "started Sunday at about 4 o'clock in the afternoon. Soon after there was a decided list of the ship, which continued all day. Sunday night the ship started to roll like a bottle and she began to list more and more on the starboard side as each hour passed.

"The passengers became nervous. All the paraphernalia on the port side were ripped from their fastenings, but at 6 a. m., Monday, when the sea became calmer and the gale died down, the starboard side continued to list more heavily.

"In fact, it was dipping into the sea. Captain Carey ordered all passengers on deck and ordered the lifebelts distributed. Then the crew began to lower the lifeboats.

"It took two hours to lower four lifeboats, numbers 4, 6 8, 10," Mack emphasized, "and while No. 8 was being lowered she crashed into the side of the ship, stoving in the lifeboat.

"The passengers, most of whom were women and children, tumbled into the water. It was a horrible sight. Confusion soon overwhelmed the passengers who had not yet got into the lifeboats. From every side there came the screaming and howling of women and children.

Prove Selves Heroes

"One woman in lifeboat number 8 had two children with her. When the boat tumbled into the water her life preserver was torn from her and all three fell into the sea. They disappeared.

"To my mind this tragedy was marked by the most blundering work of the ship's crew. The victims never had a chance. The seamen took too long to launch the boats and at least one of them was not seaworthy.

"Chief Mate Bowser showed more presence of mind than the captain. A second steward swam around in the water and transferred people from one boat to another.

"In lifeboats 4 and 6, filled mostly with women and children, there were but a few sailors to man the oars.

"I believe that the total number of persons who actually got into the lifeboats that stayed afloat was not more than 75 or 80. If others were saved they weer fished up out of the water.

Would Die Together

"Throughout all the panic Captain Carey appeared calm, but he also appeared undecided as to what to do. Lifeboats No. 4 and No. 6 were lowered so late that they capsized.

Mack said his watch stopped at 2:35 p. m. on Monday and from this fact he fixed the time of the sinking of the Vestris.

He said some people who jumped from the ship were sucked in with the awful swirl as she went down. Mack accounted for the heavy loss of life among women and children by the fact that the ship went down almost immediately, dragging the swimming passengers after it.

Swimming in the water for two and a half hours Mack finally located O. L. Maxey, his traveling companion.

"We had been pals so long we decided to die like pals," said Mack, "so we swam on together. Maxey was very courageous."

Maxey said the same thing about Mack. Both were rescued aboard the Berlin.

Maxey told of what he had learned about the cause of the sinking.

"We don't know what caused the disaster," he said, "but the Vestris was loaded with automobiles, and I do not see how the cargo could have shifted. Water entered the coal bunkers from a leak in the hull.

"We had a list from 10 p. m. Sunday, when we struck the gale, until 10 a. m. Monday, when the hurricane deck was under water. We were never told to get ready to take to the boats. We were always in water up to our knees.

"We were not frightened; we were prepared to reach a ship, not to die. We knew there had been an S O S sent out. When the Berlin picked us up there was a heavy roll, but the seas were not very high.

"For food we had crackers and water. The crew was fine. If the S O S had been sent five hours earlier everyone would have been saved."

Carl Schmidt of Chicago, whose home is in Germany, was one of the heroes of the disaster, according to the other passengers rescued on the Berlin. Schmidt would not talk about himself.

"I have nothing to say," said Schmidt, a quiet, slow-speaking fellow. He walked phlegmatically away from the group of rescued passengers on the deck.

Schmidt swam in the open sea for 21 hours before being picked up.

He was exposed for a longer time than any others. He was sighted from the Berlin several hours after the vessel had picked up lifeboat 13 with 22 persons. He was hauled aboard practically exhausted.

Archibald Bannister, boatswain's mate, told a more technical story of the disaster and the last moments of the Vestris. Bannister said eight lifeboats got safely away from the listing Vestris. The first three boats were smashed. Almost immediately after the ship went down.

Radio Man Gamely Stuck to Post Until the End

The survivors, Bannister said saw the lights of five rescue ships off across the sea at night, but could not attract attention. He said those were the worst minutes of the night as the big liners moved all about the 22 in the lifeboat, who huddled helpless and saw them move off again.

Pass Night in Storm

Bannister said the lifeboat passed through a storm before being picked up by the Berlin. The boatswain's mate said he last saw Capt. Carey standing on the port side just before the Vestris sank and said he believes the master went down with his ship.

Bannister also said he believes the radio operator, Michael O'Loughlin, went down in the vessel. One of the last to jump from the fast heeling-over vessel, Bannister said he heard the sputter of the radio instrument even as he jumped.

O'Loughlin, Bannister said, was still at his post trying to make the fast weakening signals of his set heard across the water.

Almost immediately the ship heeled over and within two minutes went down by the stern, Bannister related.

Second Steward A. Duncan said that water rolled into the coal bunkers, but he thought it was coming from an open hatch as the seas were high and were washing over the decks. He said he did not know if there was a leak in the ship's hull. He said that after jumping into the water from the keel of the overturned ship he swam about in the wreckage until picked up by a lifeboat.

Chief Engineer Avard Adams said that he dived over the side of the boat and squirmed about in the rough seas for almost an hour before getting into a lifeboat. In his opinion some of the cargo shifted, causing the list, but he refused to discuss what happened any further.

Adams said all mystery connected with the sinking ship would be cleared up later. When asked what he meant, he refused to elucidate.

Others in the crew said that Adams was one of the last to get off the Vestris. They said that due to his efficiency, the lifeboat in which they were was handled in a very seamanlike manner and that he was responsible for their final rescue.

Gaetano Abbadini of Philadelphia described the scene after the three lifeboats filled with women and children had been lost as "too horrible to be put into words."

He said it was sickening and terrifying to watch the helpless women struggling in the water, trying to save their children and calling vainly for aid.

"It is a sight I want to forget," said this traveler.

One of the most thrilling stories of all was that related by Paul A. Dana, 35 years old, of New York City, a representative of the Radio Corporation of America, one of the last to leave the ship.

He jumped overboard and seized a piece of wreckage. He saw a woman, Mrs. Clara Ball, a stewardess of New York City, floating on the waves and went to her rescue. Together they clung to the piece of wreckage.

"She and I hung on all night," Dana said. "Alone in the darkness we prayed. I know I did. Hour after hour went by. At times we did not think we could hold on any longer. Dawn came, and there was no sign of a ship.

"I turned to Mrs. Ball. She held out her hand, tears glistening in her eyes. "Goodby," she said. We shook hands. We thought it was all over with us. But one holds dearly to life and, finally, along came the American Shipper and rescued us."

Another graphic picture of tragedy was described by G. Gladianes, pantryman of the Vestris, the solitary seaman stationed in one boat containing only children as it was lowered on a davit into the sea just before the Vestris sank.

"I was the only grown person in the boat with the children," Gladianes said. "As the boat was being lowered I was holding one youngster in my arms. Just as the boat reached the water one of the big booms overhead broke and came tumbling down upon us.

"It killed the baby in my arms—although I didn't know it in the excitement. It crushed a number of other children, too. The impact flung me out of the boat.

"I went under and came up, still holding the baby. My arm was broken. I knew something was wrong with my arm, but didn't learn just what until later."

In a voice choked with emotion, C. F. Slaughter of Chicago and formerly of San Antonio, Tex., told how he had seen his wife washed away from him and how, for hours, he believed she was dead. Later he learned she had been picked up by the French tanker Myriam.

Slaughter, a traveling accountant of the International Harvester Company, said that he and his wife were in the last lifeboat that left the Vestris.

Wife Showed Courage

"I held my wife's hand," Slaughter said. "She was so brave. 'Don't fear, dear, God will take care of us,' she said as we jumped, hand in hand, into the lifeboat.

"We had to jump. For as we stood by the rail the Vestris sank suddenly, on its starboard side. It seemed to slip back from under us. I am sure it went down in less than five minutes."

Raymond L. Ricketts of Wert, Okla., told how he had helped to get the women and children in the first two boats lowered. He said he was dumbfounded when he saw one of the boats split in two when the boom fell on it and the other sink from the hole in its bottom, which had been covered by a piece of tin.

"The lifeboats were not seaworthy," said Ricketts. "I estimate that there were about 50 women and children in the two boats."

He could not say how many lifeboats put off from the ship. He left in the last one, he said, and with him were Clyde Persful, Wewoka, Okla.; Arthur Jones of Ada, Okla., and Carl Pfaff of Marietta, O. He and Persful personally launched the boat after cutting it from some rigging.

"There were 19 in our boat when it was picked up," Ricketts said. "Most of the boats were crowded to capacity, carrying 20 persons or more each."

S. Sidowski, a Los Angeles seaman, declared every port hole on the Vestris was defective, that the scuppers were plugged and that the bulkhead doors had not been water tight.

Frank Johnson, chief officer of the Vestris, was asked whether he could definitely say what had caused the disaster.

"I have nothing to say," he replied.

E. M. Walcott, of Halifax, N. S., was among the last to see Captain Carey.

"When I came up in the water," said Walcott, "I found the captain near me He had on no lifebelt. He just came up and went down again."

Walcott was picked up by a lifeboat.

One survivor, who himself has sailed the seas as master of his own vessel and who knows the traditions of the sea, vigorously criticized the conduct of the crew as the Vestris went down. He was Captain Frederick Sorenson.

Capt. Sorenson wore only a shirt and a pair of trousers as he bluntly and forcibly told a story that is almost unbelievable.

"They put us off in leaky boats," he said. "They sent us over the side in shark-infested waters with not a ship standing by because they were fools and they had not called for help when they should have done it."

Capt. Sorenson said it was one o'clock Monday afternoon that he went over the side of the sinking Vestris. He went in lifeboat No. 8, with 50 others, most of them men with a few women and children.

"The lifeboat had a hole in the bow covered with a piece of tin. It was criminal to put that boat in the water. I was in the stern, steering, and the others bailed as fast as they could but in half an hour the lifeboat was nearly swamped.

"A wave rolled across the boat, shooting me and others with me out of it. I tried to swim back to help the women and children, but the sea was too high."

Capt. Sorenson told how he pitched about in the sea, a lifebelt holding him up.

"I saw lifeboat No. 1 pass close to me in the bright light of the afternoon," he related. "There were only 10 people in it—colored members of the crew and stewards. There was also Mrs. De Vere of Los Angeles.

Famous Recipe For Stopping a Severe Cough

You'll be pleasantly surprised when you make up this simple home mixture and try it for a distressing cough or chest cold. It takes but a moment to mix and costs little, but it can be depended upon to give quick and lasting relief.

Get 2½ ounces of Pinex from any druggist. Pour this into a pint bottle; then fill it with plain granulated sugar syrup or strained honey. The full pint thus made costs no more than a small bottle of ready-made medicine, yet it is much more effective. It is pure, keeps perfectly and children love its pleasant taste.

This simple remedy has a remarkable three-fold action. It goes right to the seat of trouble, soothes away the inflammation, and loosens the germ-laden phlegm. At the same time, it is absorbed into the blood, where it acts directly upon the bronchial tubes and thus helps inwardly to throw off the whole trouble with surprising ease.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway Pine, containing the active agent of creosote, in a refined, palatable form, and known as one of the greatest healing agents for severe coughs, chest colds and bronchial troubles.

Do not accept a substitute for Pinex. It is guaranteed to give prompt relief or money refunded.

Listerine kills 200,000,000 germs in 15 seconds

Did you realize that Listerine was so powerful?

Hard to believe, isn't it, when you reflect how pleasant and safe Listerine is?

Yet in repeated tests employing the stubborn B. Typhosus (typhoid) germ, used by the Government to test antiseptics, Listerine killed 200 million in 15 seconds!

Now you can understand why millions use Listerine to check ordinary colds and sore throat—both caused by germs.

Keep a bottle handy and use it daily, especially after exposure to germ-laden crowds. It helps you ward off trouble.

Steward Explains Cause of Wreck of Vestris

The first clear explanation as to the cause of the ill fated Vestris' foundering came today from Alfred Duncan of Liverpool, a steward on the liner, when he, with others, was landed in New York.

Duncan said in Saturday's storm a half door, used as a passage while a ship is being coaled, was battered in, admitting water which flooded out the engines.

Flooding of the engines made the mechanical pumps useless and the water gained steadily, tilting the liner on the starboard side.

In a desperate attempt to stem the inrush of water, Capt. Carey ordered all hands to work with hand buckets, but this bailing had little, if any, effect.

U. S. Officials to Hold Inquiry in Sea Tragedy

New York, Nov. 14 (AP)—Charles H. Tuttle, United States attorney, announced this afternoon that he would commence an investigation tomorrow on the wreck of the Vestris.

Owners of Sunken Ship Refuse to Comment

New York, Nov. 14 (INS)—The owners of the Vestris today reserved all comment on the wreck and rescue until statements have been taken from the surviving officers of the ill fated vessel.

David Cook, vice-president of Sanderson & Sons, Inc., agents here for the Lamport & Holt Line, said he had no comment to make "just yet" when asked what the line had to say of charges by passengers that officers of the Vestris were dilatory in not summoning aid sooner and that the work of launching lifeboats was "slow and sloppy."

The Story of a "Good Gunman" and His Battles

CHAPTER 15

So [illegible] had Eddie and Marian been engrossed with [illegible] that the sound of an [illegible] outside the door [illegible] with surprise. Eddie was on his feet instantly and the girl sat upright in her chair.

"[illegible]," he said to her [illegible] for her bruised [illegible]. A voice from outside [illegible] a horse. Eddie sat a [illegible] in the living room [illegible] on the porch. A head [illegible] out of the car and a [illegible] voice demanded:

"[illegible] I'm out looking for Miss [illegible]. Her horse went home with an empty saddle this evening [illegible] out looking for her. [illegible] you see her pass your place [illegible]?"

"She is here," Eddie said.

The voice boomed with surprise. "The [illegible]!" A bulky body climbed out the automobile. "Is she hurt?"

"Not much. Come on inside."

The man came up to the porch, a [illegible] robust figure, a young man with a full face and eyes that protruded slightly in a manner to remind Eddie of a bulldog. Instantly, and for no explainable reason, the [illegible] between them became [illegible] antagonism.

"[illegible] in the front room," Eddie said.

The feet that tramped across the [illegible] into the room made harsh [illegible] on the floor. Eddie's eyes looked at the man's back and noted that his legs were [illegible] in the [illegible].

"Hello, Tom," Marian said casually.

"[illegible], what under the sun are you doing [illegible]?" [illegible] inquired [illegible] you know your folks [illegible] half scared to death [illegible]. Me and [illegible] have been looking all over for you for a couple of hours."

Marian smiled at him. "I am [illegible]," she said, meekly. "I should [illegible] home right away. The [illegible] shook me up a bit and [illegible] right outside Mr. Regan's [illegible] I came up here—but I don't [illegible] you gentlemen [illegible] know each [illegible]. This is Tom Freeman, Mr. [illegible]."

[illegible] turned [illegible] Eddie.

"[illegible] up her [illegible] her here in your [illegible] way?"

"She's been all right here," Eddie [illegible].

HOOVER PLANS FOR VISIT TO MEXICO

Stanford University, Cal., Nov. 14 (AP)—Herbert Hoover will visit Mexico during the good will tour of Latin America, on which he will embark Monday from San Pedro, but whether it will be the first or the last of the republics on the itinerary is yet to be decided.

Alternate plans are under consideration, one calling for a stop at Acapulco, en route to South America, and the other for a call at Vera Cruz on the return trip from Rio de Janeiro to Florida.

If the visit is deferred until near the journey's end, Hoover would proceed from Vera Cruz to the Mexican capital by rail to be welcomed there by Emilio Portes Gil.

STUDIES TOUR PLANS.

It is the belief here Mr. Hoover would prefer to make an official call on the president at Mexico City, since he will call on the presidents of other republics in their capitals.

[illegible] yesterday in conference [illegible] expedition to [illegible] Hoover turned today [illegible] study of the southern [illegible] it was indicated a final [illegible] would await the arrival here [illegible] Henry P. Fletcher, American ambassador to Peru, who will accompany Mr. Hoover as the official representative of the State Department.

[illegible] Victor A. Kimberly, commander of the Maryland, was to [illegible] with Hoover today various [illegible] the voyage to Valparaiso [illegible] the party will make the overland [illegible] to Buenos Aires.

DONOVAN PAYS CALL.

The President-elect now is receiving [illegible]. Among his visitors has been Senator Tasker L. Oddie of Nevada, member of the Senate naval committee, who favors an expansion [illegible] nation's cruiser fleet even [illegible] the limits which were contained in the House bill to be [illegible] for action in the Senate at [illegible] session.

The almost simultaneous visit of [illegible] J. Donovan, assistant to the attorney general of the United States, and Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt, an assistant attorney-general, at the Hoover home, revived political discussions around [illegible]. Some prognosticators believe Donovan, a close personal friend of the President-elect, will succeed John G. Sargent as attorney-general on March 4. Mrs. Willebrandt, whose home is in California, said she had called on the President-elect simply to pay her respects.

Quincy Memorial to War Dead Reads 'Perpetuatates'

An examination of the tablet dedicated on Armistice Day to Quincy's war dead today revealed that everyone concerned in the memorial had overlooked the misspelling of "perpetuates," which on the bronze tablet appears "perpetuatates."

Mayor Thomas J. McGrath and a considerable section of the Quincy citizens were somewhat exercised over the misspelling and it is probable the tablet mold will be recut and then recast.

Super Jordan ties for 1.00

mean that you give the world your best face

There's really nothing like a smart looking necktie. It makes all the difference in the world—and there are four good reasons why super-Jordan are smart ties:

1. They're wool lined — this means they spring back into shape
2. They're hand-made — this gives them more resilience
3. They're new patterns — selected by our buyer from a great number.
4. They're the best colors — according to our fashion advisers in London and Paris.

The newest thing in prints today . . . and quite the smartest we've seen in many a day, are the new LEATHER PRINTS—inspired by the old Florentian art of leather tooling and painting. These prints have a way of blending colors such as you've never seen before in any printed silks.

For wear under fur coats they are particularly smart and give that necessary touch of color.

MR. BOSTON

By Jack Conway

"IT isn't necessary for any high-powered press agent to tell me Andre Routis can fight," said Mr. Boston today. "He's a Frenchman. Isn't that enough of a recommendation?

"Remember Eugene Crique? [illegible] Daniels a month later.

"Crique was A FIGHTER! [illegible] Part of his jaw was shot away and it had been replaced by a silver plate.

"When Crique knocked Kilbane for a loop [illegible] would grab the next boat back to [illegible]

[illegible]

"I CONSIDER Routis a better fighter than Crique. I am not taking the word of any press agent or manager for this either. I have seen the Frenchman in action several times in New York. He is a human dynamo once the gong sounds. He fires more punches in a round than most battlers do during a dozen fights.

"Andre comes from fighting stock. His father joined the colors during the war. When Andre was 13 years old, his father was killed in action. The youngster's mother dropped dead when she was informed of the death of her husband.

"Farm boy, mechanic, boxer. That's how Andre climbed to the top.

"ROUTIS engaged in his first fight at a French picnic. Kid Bully was on the warpath. He happened to pick on Routis and the kid knocked him for a goal.

"PETE REILLY brought Andre to the United States. At the time Pete managed Jack Delaney and a flock of other battlers. Reilly finally sold Delaney to Joe Jacobs for $50,000. He tossed in Routis just for good measure, never dreaming that the Frenchman would go on to win a championship.

"Routis got his big chance when he battled Tony Canzoneri for the world's featherweight championship in New York. He carried the spirit and punch of Crique into the ring, but he didn't have the handicap of a silver plate in place of a shattered jaw. And he won.

"Like Crique, Routis isn't afraid of any man in the world.

"'I have two hands and can take care of myself,' said the Frenchman.

"And I know he can.

"Great fighter as Dick Finnegan is, he will have to put up a marvelous battle if he is to win on Saturday night. He will be in there with Andre Routis a Frenchman who has the spirit of Verdun in his veins."

Tigers Driving For War With Bulldog

Princeton, N. J., Nov. 14—The Princeton football eleven is being driven at high speed again by Bill Roper. The Nassau head coach, however, has promised that there will be no more scrimmage in Tigertown this fall.

Roper said he had found that a scrimmage at this time of the year only served to injure valuable men.

The dummy scrimmage which he is giving the Tigers enables him and his assistants to watch individual play closely. The perfect execution of each assignment is the chief aim for the Yale game, now only three days away.

The inspirational coach had added another sign to the decorations on University Field. It reads, "60 Minutes."

The dummy scrimmage lasted for half an hour, with both offensive and defensive work for the Nassau forwards. The first backfield which now seems sure to start against Yale worked for half this time, with Norman at quarter, Bennett and Wittmer at the halves, and Mike Miles at fullback.

JONES WORKS OUT

When the second set of backs went in to the work, Graham Jones got his first good workout in many weeks.

Jones was quarterback, Scarlett and Requardt, halfbacks, and Fanshawe, fullback. After the dummy scrimmage, the first backs and ends had a long drill in forward passes with a line made up of freshmen defending against the scrubs.

When the first string men went out, the new backfield had Lowry in place of Requardt. Bennett, Lowry, and finally Scarlett all were throwing passes on a bewildering variety of plays which were getting excellent catches, especially from Miles and Stinson.

It will be strange indeed if the Tigers find themselves in Saturday's game without a man who can be counted on to engineer a dangerous overhead attack.

KICKING DRILL

The drill ended with more running plays and a kicking drill for Bennett, Requardt and Lowry. The varsity were tackling a scrub, who received punts and five linesmen on the offensive were pitted against three freshmen.

Capt. Chuck Howe was given a rest, and Moore was told merely to take a long walk. Sam Lovejoy will return today after a long layoff.

Yale in Stiff Workout Today

New Haven, Nov. 14—Yale's contribution toward its program for the Princeton game was a long signal drill.

The varsity players were tired when a halt was called after two hours. The practice was the longest and most intensive of its kind this season. It was preceded by a practice in fundamentals.

Today's schedule [illegible] probably the only tough session of [illegible] football before the game Saturday.

The Bulldog lineup at Tigertown will be:

Five of the eleven, Greene, Charlesworth, Eddy, Hoben and Decker, started against Princeton last year. During the game Marting was inserted at tackle.

Garvey left the infirmary and with Harlan Ellis, reserve quarterback, was at the field in civilian clothes. Garvey's injured ankle was badly swollen and the coaches said again that they have no intention of playing either at Princeton.

Refusal of Ministers Benefits Cripples

Lexington, Ky., Nov. 13 (AP)—After a declaration by Methodist ministers that they would not accept for the orphanage in Louisville a portion of the receipts from the charity race meet held Monday at the Idle Hour Farm, Barry Shannon, manager of Col. E. R. Bradlye's farm, asserted tonight the money, approximately $650, would be given to the crippled children of Lexington instead.

"Neither I nor Col. Bradlye have a crow to pick with the ministers for their action, but we do feel sorry for the little children in their home at Thanksgiving and Christmas dinner," said Mr. Shannon.

In issuing his statement, Mr. Shannon declared that this same home during the past five years accepted nearly $1500 from the master of Idle Hour Farm.

Passes and Punts

By BILL GRIMES

For the first time this season, Coach Joe McKenney of Boston College is worried over the outcome of a game. Joe fears Canisius for two reasons.

First, the Eagles went through a tough game Armistice Day and will have but four days to recover, and second, Luke Urban's team plays the same rugged type of football as Fordham.

Luke Urban [illegible] scouts at every Boston College game this season and B. C. again will be called upon to outsmart its opponents.

Out at the Heights there is a tendency to look upon the Conn. Aggies' game as a push-over, but such is far from the correct slant. It will be to the advantage of the Eagles and their sympathizers to bear in mind that Conn. Aggies have not been scored upon this year.

It will be interesting to note how many of the so-called experts put Capt. Warren McGuirk of Boston College at tackle on their "All" teams. Capt. McGuirk has been a most valuable asset to B. C. since he reported to Coach Cavanaugh three years ago, but under John McManmon he has developed into the outstanding tackle in the East.

The day is not far off when football coaches will be risking their jobs when they send crippled athletes into games. Players are now sent into action if they are able to stand on their feet and in such weakened condition are very liable to serious injury. Compared with the future health of any football player, this dear old alma mater stuff is just so much Blah.

Strong Rogers High Team Comes to Play Medford

R. I. ELEVEN LIABLE TO CONQUER

Rogers Has Heavy Line and Fast, Shifty Set of Backfield Performers

By DICK McSWEENEY

The Rogers high eleven of Newport, R. I. is coming to Medford this Saturday with an even chance of defeating the Mystic eleven. Coach Collins of Medford scouted the Rhode Island team last Friday and he thinks that it has enough power to give the Blue and White more than a mere work out.

The 98-yard run of Walter Garrity for the second South Boston touchdown was a great play.

Garrity was all out of breath after the long run and was forced to sit down for a few minutes to recover his wind.

The shifting of Gould from center to fullback on the Latin eleven showed that Gould possesses great capabilities as a back. He is cool when tossing forwards, he can drop kick, and he backs up the line intelligently.

The Peninsula forwards have done a good job in keeping out the opposing frontiersmen.

Sees Women's Clubs As Power For Good

"FOR some time the newspapers have recognized that the doings of the women's clubs are news, and now it is significant that our activities are a power for furthering the world's work," says Mrs. A. A. Packard, president of the Massachusetts Federation of Women's Clubs.

This gracious, fair-haired lady threw wide the doors of her stately home to visiting club women, many of whom had to have [illegible]

One of the most pleasant surprises of the day came with the presentation by the Wollaston Women's club, of a silver banded [illegible] made from a piece of the [illegible] Constitution which has been submerged in water for over 100 years.

While [illegible] in the silent [illegible] didn't make any difference [illegible] now that the talkies are making a good speaking and singing [illegible] a profitable talent Larry [illegible] his gifts a secret.

PARAMOUNT has been bitten so [illegible] the talkie bug that they have lost all balance and sense of proportion. They let both Harry D'Arrast, their prize director, and Bebe Daniels, by far their best comedienne, go without a restraining hand to keep them. But some sixth sense must have induced them to persuade Evelyn Brent to remain with them.

After a ridiculous indifference they have renewed her option and she will remain with them. Perhaps they decided to keep her in the family after several of our big companies put in a bid for her services. We usually appreciate [illegible] else wants.

IF this signing of Broadway stars continues there won't be a player left along the Great White Way. Every time an actor or an actress says his lines satisfactorily some movie producer up and signs him for the talkies.

The latest one to be flirting with the sound pictures is Edna Best, star of "The High Road." It's Famous that wants her and Richard Dix, with whom she will play, providing the contract goes through. She will support Dix in "Bull Dog Drummond."

BELLE BENNETT has been mentioned for the part of the servant girl in "Lummox" ever since there was first talk of United Artists' converting Fannie Hurst's novel into a motion picture. Now the talk is again revived, perhaps because Miss Bennett has made a test for the part within the last few days and Herbert Brenon is said to have commented favorably upon it. It's a great part in fiction and if handled properly it should be an unusual characterization on the screen.

THE Fox "Follies" continue to be of absorbing interest here in Hollywood. Sue Carroll is rumored as being slated for a part and Conrad Conrad and his group of song writers who came West only a short time ago, are writing the lyrics and music. Winfield Sheehan is so pepped up over the idea that he is going to as much trouble to make the Fox "Follies" a standardized entertainment as Florenz Ziegfeld goes to each year when he glorifies the American girl.

SNAPSHOTS of Hollywood collected at random: Dorothy Sebastian in a bright scarlet dress playing a mean game of tennis. Marion Davies [illegible] as a [illegible] serving real Italian spaghetti at a dinner party.

Harry D'Arrast [illegible] to prove that his foreign car is a road eater. Clarence Brown telling how to get thin and illustrating his lecture by showing his own reduced waistline. Jane Winton [illegible] the man [illegible]

A PRACTICAL AND COMFORTABLE GARMENT

6265. Materials in nursery designs, flannel, outing flannel, crepe, crepe de chine, long cloth and madras as well as pongee and albatross may be used for this model. The garment has a convenient drop back, and may be finished in knee or ankle length. Shaped facings trim the fronts and the neck edge. A small pocket is arranged on the front. The sleeve has fullness at the wrist above a narrow band cuff. As pictured, crepe in a nursery design was used with facings of white lawn.

The Pattern for this style is cut in 6 Sizes: 2, 4, 6, 8, 10 and 12 years. A 6-year size, in ankle length will require 3⅛ yards of 27 inch material together with ⅝ yard of contrasting material for facings on fronts, neck, pocket and cuffs. If made in knee length ⅜ yard less of the figured material will be required.

Pattern mailed to any address on receipt of 12c in coins or stamps. Send number and size of pattern ordered with your name and address.

Send 12c in coins or stamps for our UP-TO-DATE FALL AND WINTER 1928-29 BOOK OF FASHIONS.

Address all orders to Boston American Pattern Dept., Box 130, Times Plaza Station, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Fads and Fashions

If two can live as cheaply as one, one might as well take care of a two-skin fur scarf as well as a single. Silver fox and red fox made up in two skins are particularly stunning and are only rivalled by the same mode in sable and marten.

Tripping the light fantastic would be a perfect joy in a pair of evening slippers of velvet with a pen line design. The kid trimming of gold, silver and nacre is attractive decoration. A modernistic buckle of crystal fastens the straps together.

The sweater subscribes to the mode of tweed, and appears in both pull over and cardigan models with novel tweedish designs. Matching hose, scarves and gloves can be had to complete a very sporty ensemble for the last golfing days of the year.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

GIRLS of 15 are hardly old enough to worry about lovelorn problems, are they! but in this precocious age, they sometimes do take themselves and their friendships with boys very seriously. So here is a bit of advice for their benefit, in reply to the following letter:

"Dear Miss Fairfax:

"We would like to have your advice on this problem: is it proper for girls of 15 to go with boys of the same age to the theater or invite them to their homes on Sunday afternoon? Should a girl of that age accept an inexpensive gift from a boy? Will it make a boy think less of you to give him a good-night kiss? Is the good-night kiss proper? We thank you. WONDERING."

IT is proper for girls of 15 to do as their parents wish, when it comes to companionship of boys of the same age. So ask your mothers the questions you have asked me, girls. They understand the circumstances of your particular case far better than I can without knowing you personally, and their advice is almost certain to be wise and disinterested. Besides, you are legally obliged to follow their instructions until you are of age.

Nearly all modern parents agree, however, that girls and boys need [illegible] friendship and companionship, so they plan to have them meet at properly chaperoned matinees, birthday parties, dancing classes, Sunday teas or small informal evening parties during vacation or week-ends.

Think of boys as comrades and friends, not as sweethearts. The good-night kiss is exceedingly silly and expresses syrupy sentimentality, which should have no place in wholesome friendships. Let love wait for later years.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a young woman of 27 years. I have been keeping company with a young man for almost a year. When I had known him about two months he asked me to marry him. I thought we did not know each other well enough, so I refused him. I have been expecting him to mention it again, but he never has. He does not seem to be quite as fond of me as at first.

I have changed my mind now and want to marry him. Should I mention it to him? The only thing that stops me is fear of having him refuse. Recently I told him there was something I had wanted to tell him for a long time, thinking he might take the hint and ask me again. But he did not, although he seems very anxious to know what my secret is. Should I tell him that I now want to marry him? I love him dearly. Your reply will be appreciated. ANXIOUS.

LET your friend take the initiative in regard to the proposal, my dear. If he still loves you, in due time he will ask you again to marry him. If he has changed his mind and his love is growing cool, what would be the use of your proposing to him, only to be refused. Please do not build all your hopes of happiness on his love, will you, until you and he become engaged.

Listen World -:- Elsie Robinson

IF you were a young man of 28—a good job—no bad habits—and wanted to settle down and have a [illegible] home [illegible] would you choose for a wife a [illegible] girl or one of the old-fashioned domestic treasures?

[illegible] would like to know—for that's his problem.

Here are two girls, both of them perfectly willing to be Mrs. Bert, and [illegible] [illegible] sweet and [illegible] will be like a garden if he marries Rose—and she'll [illegible] the place. But—and here's the rub—if Bert wishes to discuss anything but biscuits and babies, Rose will be a total loss. And Bert's one of those chaps who likes to "talk things over [illegible]"

Edna would be a wonder to talk things over with. Edna's brisk and energetic and tremendously efficient. Life arranges itself in systems and schedules and budgets under the touch of her cool, capable fingers. She's drawing down a big salary as private secretary for one of our biggest men and she'd keep Bert up on his toes, trying to equal her record. But—

She has never done an hour's housework in her life. Yet she's willing to try for Bert's sake.

And if she does. Well, it's a pretty sure bet that she'll never have the "homey touch" which Rose has. She may count calories and budget bills, but she'll never, never melt into Bert's arms and gurgle a welcome and make him feel like a Great Big Wonderful Conquering Hero. In fact, if the awful truth must be faced she's much more apt to make him feel like a dented nickel in comparison with her snappy performance.

And suppose she does? Suppose she does keep life dynamic and difficult—isn't that better for a man than sinking into a padded chair and listening to gurgles?

Bert's mother says "No!" She wants her boy to have an old-fashioned wife with none of these new-fangled notions.

But I'm thinking that a wife without new-fangled notions, who doesn't understand the world of today and the problems her man must meet, is a bad investment for any bright boy.

If I were a man I'd pick a girl who could think—and take my chances on the apple pies. For you can manage to fumble through life without apple pies, but you're certainly out of luck if your comrade lacks an understanding brain.

3 Cup Cake Recipes

and Mrs. Singleton's tasting experience

IN making cup cakes be sure that your shortening is so pure and sweet that it will not detract from the delicate flavor of the cakes themselves. But, how to tell? Simply taste your shortening.

Mrs. Singleton did this, and wrote us:

"I have used Crisco for years, but never thought of tasting it before. So I closed my eyes and tasted first some of my butter, then Crisco.

"I was amazed at the delicious sweetness and freshness of Crisco. It seemed so much like sweet, unsalted butter."

There—that's the message one taste of Crisco gave Mrs. Singleton—and will give you!

Cup Cakes

½ cup Crisco
1 cup sugar
3 eggs
1¾ cups flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
½ cup milk
1 teaspoon vanilla

Cream Crisco and sugar. Add beaten eggs and mix well. Mix and sift flour, baking powder and salt and add alternately with the milk to the first mixture. Add vanilla and beat thoroughly. Pour into greased muffin or cup cake pans and bake in quick oven (425 degrees F.) 15 to 20 minutes.

This recipe makes 15 to 20 cakes.

Filled Cup Cakes

Follow recipe for Cup Cakes. When cool split in halves crosswise and remove portion of the cake. Fill center with stiffly whipped cream, flavored and sweetened. Put halves together and ice all over with Creamy Chocolate Frosting.

Creamy Chocolate Frosting

1½ cups milk
1 teaspoon vanilla
4 squares unsweetened chocolate
1½ cups powdered sugar
Few grains salt

Cook milk with chocolate, cut in pieces, over a slow fire, stirring until thick and smooth. Add sugar and cook again until very thick, stirring constantly. Cool and add vanilla and salt.

Snicker Doodles

½ cup Crisco
1 cup sugar
2 eggs
½ cup seeded raisins
½ cup currants
⅔ cup nuts
1 teaspoon soda
1 tablespoon hot water
2½ cups flour
½ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon clove
½ teaspoon mace
1½ teaspoons cinnamon
¾ cup sour milk

Cream Crisco and sugar together. Add unbeaten egg yolks and mix well. Add raisins, currants and nuts, cut fine. Add soda, dissolved in hot water. Mix and sift flour, salt and spices and add alternately with the sour milk to the first mixture. Fold in one stiffly beaten egg white. (Save other white for frosting.) Pour into well-greased muffin pans and bake in a hot oven (375 degrees F.) 15 to 20 minutes.

This recipe makes 18 medium-sized cup cakes.

Frosting

1 egg white
2 tablespoons sweet cream
Confectioners' sugar
¾ teaspoon mace

Add cream to unbeaten egg white and mix well. Add sugar, a little at a time, until frosting is the right consistency to spread. Add mace and mix well.

TIGER LOVE by EUSTACE HALE BALL

The Amazing Story of the Love of a Charming Dancer

CHAPTER 33

"I TELL you, my friend, it is an easy plan and you will be a [illegible] man inside three months, if we both carry out the little scheme. Who will be the worse for it, at that?" The handsome young speaker stroked his thin mustache, smiling malevolently from his slits of eyes, across the elaborately inlaid teak table of the great palace room.

"But, the Rajah is no fool," came the retort from his listener, a swarthy, [illegible] man of suave manner and [illegible] ... Now" ... and he waved his [illegible] fingers in a gesture which seemed to include the entire world in its scope ... "now, I am a [illegible] prince, myself! I am second in real power, as you know, Capt. Baldwin. Not even you know how strong is my grip within the prince's court."

He puffed away at a delicately [illegible] perfumed cigarette and his self-[illegible] was scornfully unconcealed.

"And, besides, why should I try to [illegible] the Cobra expelled from her sweet seat on the highest step of the [illegible] throne? She is true to the little name which all the other women of the harem call her; indeed she is a cobra whose sting is death."

The white man tugged at his mustache and [illegible] as he tilted a flagon of liquor to refill his own and the other's glass.

"What is more deadly than a [illegible] close to the heart of its [illegible]? I do not ask you to do more than [illegible] the trigger. In this case, Rasta Valika, [illegible] court of [illegible] Kandura [illegible], and [illegible] second in real power, as you admit. [illegible] And why not let [illegible] the way to that supreme power in this fat peasant [illegible] by the deadliness of her poison?"

The smoke of the Captain's cigarette twisted high into the silken tapestries above their [illegible] table, and the man stared through the [illegible] across the [illegible] of the Rajah's palace to the bustling of the Oriental street throngs.

The turbaned one scratched his chin thoughtfully and studied the heavily jeweled rings on his fingers. From their glittering facets came an eerie flame which kindled his [illegible], his ambition and his mounting [illegible].

"I have longed for the supreme power," he admitted slowly. "But the Rajah did not study in England for nothing. He learned the tricks of diplomacy, of shrewd government, as well as he did cricket and gambling. He has been very good to me, and his [illegible]. So you see it is a great task ... to overcome his strength ... and to overcome my own natural gratitude for his favor."

"Gratitude!" The Captain grunted with disgust. "You are too [illegible] and so am I to nurse such an [illegible] serpent in our bosoms. To carry out the subject of serpents, let us get down to business. We already have a perfect understanding as to what we both want, Rasta Valika," and the [illegible] young face became almost white as the eyes narrowed again with their evil intensity.

"You, my cultured Hindu friend, see the riches of your master and would become prince of the realm," he continued as the other's dark eyes flashed an affirmation. "You also yearn for the embraces and the favor of this beautiful Salma, the Cobra. She has half listened to your proposals and yet she still believes that she loves the Rajah ... you are jealous of him for his woman, as well as for his wealth and rank, eh?"

The Hindu drew in his breath with a hiss of hatred between the white clenched teeth. His tapering fingers clawed with an unpleasant rasping sound on the inlaid top of the [illegible] was not [illegible] but merely [illegible].

"Well, Rasta Valika, it is now within the clutch of those fingers of [illegible] ... more jewels than they [illegible] than the Maharajah has—more power than you could ever wrest from him at his death ... and freedom from these [illegible] who would hound you [illegible] your dying day if you [illegible] his throne."

"[illegible] own fingers clean of [illegible]." The Captain [illegible]. "Let the woman [illegible] the deed, [illegible] jealousy and the [illegible] he has [illegible] fairer [illegible] ... you can [illegible] chests and carry from Abadipur in a single trunk that which will buy you more power than he possesses here, where he is still a vassal to the British empire."

"I don't understand that last," Valika's eyes widened.

"I have told you much before and it is only part of my long plan, the work of months in which [illegible] one but you, my comrade, knew that I was anything else than a Russian [illegible] from the Czar's regime, now picking up a living in Oriental trading for European buyers. [illegible] cobra sting away the [illegible] you take her and escape, through my help to the wide world beyond the clutch of the British lions [illegible]. In a single trunk you can carry enough jewels to make you one of the richest men in the world ... Riches mean power, my friend ... riches buy new friends and [illegible] discarded ones who have lost their [illegible]. [illegible] are the key to the pleasures of the world, and—if there is one—the next."

The Captain chuckled bitterly, as he poured his words into the eager ears of the fascinated servitor of the Hindu [illegible].

"[illegible] with the Rajah on one of his trips across Europe, and saw what his wealth would secure ... you, a simple secretary then. Think of it for yourself. The Rajah, whom you hate in your heart, out of the way forever ... and your hands are washed of guilt, for it will be through the deed of a jealous favorite who has been cast off ... If the British capture her —why worry, Rasta Valika? With the Rajah's wealth there are five continents of beautiful women. It is a big world, and I have seen most of it."

'If I Escape, What Will Happen?' Demanded Rasta

"If I escape, what will happen in Abadipur?" demanded Rasta. "And [illegible] I do not work for a [illegible], like a coolie."

"My [illegible], simple [illegible] friend. You take the [illegible] woman ... [illegible] preparing to [illegible] it from the British, from [illegible] ... They call us reds, and we will paint the earth that color [illegible] we can control ... the first great blow will be the revolution in India, and it will sweep [illegible] at the start when Rajah [illegible], with his fool [illegible] his friends, [illegible] and his Piccadilly [illegible] ... I can collect it ... with your aid."

"And how will I enjoy the loot, brave Russian friend?" asked the Oriental with a vague smile. "I will be the monkey who pulls the chestnuts out of the fire for the fox to burn my own fingers."

The Captain's [illegible] contracted angrily for an instant and then the cold smile came to his hard lips. He shook his head.

"You are [illegible]. I am more of a fool than you, for I am working for a CAUSE and will be dead long before my prize is won completely. Power will satisfy me, Rasta Valika [illegible] the rulers of Russia before the revolution—and [illegible] long enough [illegible] the women [illegible] the pleasures and [illegible] before the [illegible] sweeps the world ... and after that ... [illegible]"

[illegible]

"[illegible] ever religious [illegible]. It [illegible] a bargain at that. [illegible] sure about the jealousy of the [illegible]? The Rajah has been very good to her [illegible] even though she has been in his harem these ten years, now."

"I have the little blossom which will open into a tree of jealousy whose fruits will poison the mind of a [illegible] before six months [illegible]. That [illegible] the secret which [illegible] slipping into the palace to [illegible] today. I have found [illegible] of death in the most beautiful [illegible] I have ever laid my eyes upon. How does that please you, comrade?"

Rasta Valika stared, pursed his lips and shook his head.

"The Rajah's hairs are grayer than they once were, my good captain. He has the choice of every maiden in his territory, wide as this domain is. All Europe has been [illegible] for the price, and he has had it. That is not sufficient, I fear."

The Captain's Eyes Slotted In Their Ominous Way

The Captain's basilisk eyes slotted again in their ominous way and he leaned forward to whisper hoarsely lest even the table might hear his inner secret.

"The fairest fruit, the most savory viand, the most tempting sweetmeat is not appreciated at its best unless served in an unusual [illegible] appetizing manner ... and I have a morsel of delight for the [illegible] which will be so strange to his jaded tastes, offered on a [illegible] ... Ah, [illegible] he [illegible] his [illegible] before I have completed my [illegible].

"The whole trick in stirring the appetite is through the senses—the [illegible] of the roses, the sound of [illegible] in a gentle voice, the sight of virginal loveliness garbed in the artistry of the ages, the touch of lustrous tresses, warm hot hands and an ardent, thrilling body, and finally—the taste of maddening lips."

The dark-skinned Hindu breathed heavily as the flame of the Captain's words [illegible] his sensual soul. His eyes [illegible] and he listened eagerly.

"[illegible] these [illegible] days I found [illegible] me following [illegible] railroad builder Rasta Valika [illegible] his strange quest into the jungle," continued the Captain, provokingly stopping to light a fresh cigarette. "I was disguised as a native, and as no one but you even knew of my trip, it is another tactic in our plot to madden [illegible] native workers on the [illegible] bridge and tracks—to start the hatred of every white man, woman and child in Abadipur, begin [illegible] bloodlust and riots, and allow you to escape just as the devilish British are [illegible] the [illegible]! We will base our whole plan on this Yankee's [illegible]! For he is in love with the girl."

"And who is the girl?" demanded his fellow plotter, in amazement.

"Prepare for the shock of your life, my friend." A Satanic gleam [illegible] the handsome, evil face of the Russian. "The girl with whom I [illegible] accomplish the ruin of a high caste Hindu prince is none other than a common dancing [illegible] of the streets. I have seen her myself and I have seen her dance ... such [illegible] and such beauty as I have never before beheld."

His lips twisted into a voluptuous reminiscence.

"Were it not for my Cause I would have taken her myself."

Rasta Valika's jaw fell. His eyes protruded.

"A common dancing girl ..." he gasped, incredulous. "A low caste woman for the Rajah? And you ... you ... wanted her ... Impossible."

"I will tell you of her, and later you shall see her ... Listen, comrade, and you shall draw your own conclusions."

Winter

DRAWN BY

HAIL, WINTER! On all sides we hear the greeting given the King of the Seasons! To some it means the never-ending joys of snow and brisk winds that whip the roses into the cheeks and make one thrill to the joy of life. Out come the skates and the skis and the toboggans and away they go [illegible] snow balls find [illegible] and [illegible] is tucked away into a soft handful of snow.

That is, for some, all these [illegible] mean Winter! [illegible] others think of it as a cold, [illegible] away they have to [illegible] exposed to a cold wind, so they [illegible] rush away in search of the [illegible]. Dr. Belden Writes on Urge to Keep Young

By DR. BRICE BELDEN.

WHEN we are young we want to grow up and be old. But when we actually are mature it is not long before we become fearful of losing our youth and, during the rest of our lives—[illegible] the major part of it—we do everything possible to keep young or at least to appear young.

No [illegible] objection can be raised against this insistent [illegible] to remain youthful unless, indeed, it becomes [illegible] and we become [illegible]

Such people actually exist. And [illegible] does one [illegible] women [illegible] lamenting that they are no longer young.

Youth has advantages—but so has old age. Each period of life can and should yield satisfactory returns.

Confucius, one of the wisest of the wise that ever lived, said this: "At 15 my mind was bent on learning. At 30 I stood firm. At 40 I was free from delusions. At 50 I understood the laws of Providence. At 60 my ears were attentive to the truth. At 70 I could follow the promptings of my heart without overstepping the mean."

In this way does one of the greatest sages the world has ever known review his own life.

As you grow older you change. You are constantly developing. At any one period of life you do not think and feel as you did five years before. And if you stop to consider the matter carefully you are sure to realize that, although you may have lost something, you have also gained something in its stead.

Youth, therefore, should not be re[illegible] ... Nor [illegible] to appear young, even if one is not, at any price.

[illegible] We don't want to get [illegible] our time. But, [illegible] want to hold on to youth too long, either.

If you will recall when you were young it will be brought home to you that actually being young was not always pleasant by any means.

You had your trials and tribulations then as you have them now. You were [illegible] yea. On the other hand, you were often scared lest this unbounded energy might [illegible]—and perhaps [illegible]. Often you envied the poise, the influence, the position, the wealth [illegible] or whatnot of your elders.

Try to obtain a perspective on life as did Confucius, but try to acquire [illegible] on yourself as soon as you can.

If you have [illegible] can learn to make the most of the years as [illegible] gone before.

Then you will [illegible] life [illegible] as much [illegible] when you were seventeen.

TIRED? BLUE? DISCOURAGED?

Constipation affects people that way. You may have it and not know it. For constipation can persist even when bowel actions are regular.

If you suffer from sick headaches or biliousness; if you have sallow skin or yellowish tinge in your eyes it means that your system is sluggish, that you are constipated,—and you should do something about it—NOW.

The modern and effective remedy is Beecham's laxative Pills. They're harmless, mild, and pleasant to take. Act quickly but without griping. Nearly a century of success recommends them. 50c at all druggists; trial size, 25c. Remember to ask for Beecham's Pills.

Proposals!

A [illegible] loveliness [illegible] than words why this [illegible] girl has received [illegible] flattering proposals [illegible] and stage land. [illegible] Colette Francis of 255 East [illegible] now one of the [illegible] in the Broadway hit, "Rio [illegible]"

[illegible] Francis says: "Since I've [illegible] so many people [illegible] what I do to get the [illegible] golden gleam and sparkle [illegible] I am beginning to [illegible] really taking wonderful care [illegible] I really never thought [illegible] it. What I do is so simple [illegible] many of my girl friends [illegible] New York. I just put a little [illegible] on my brush each [illegible] That keeps my hair [illegible] and gleaming, makes it easy to dress and holds it like I arrange [illegible]. My scalp was very [illegible] and I had a lot of dandruff when I first started on it, but all that trouble stopped quickly. And [illegible] Danderine keeps my hair so clean I don't need to shampoo half as often now."

Danderine removes that oily film from your hair and gives it new life and lustre. It isn't oily and doesn't show. It gives tone and vigor to the scalp. The generous bottles are just 35c at any drug or toilet counter. A delicately fragranced necessity for the well-groomed girl.

LAZINESS AND IDEAS

By LUCY LOWELL

LAZINESS is a very fine thing indeed, taken in homeopathic doses not to close together.

Genius, we long have been told, is no more than infinite capacity for taking pains and this is all very well and very true. But the shine rubs off genius which keeps too everlastingly at it; all work and no play makes the brightest mind in the world stodgy and prosy and dyspeptic.

Fasten the mind upon something; study that thing concentratedly, from all angles, exhaustively. You [illegible] find in the end that consciously you have retained only some of what you have learned about it.

But subconsciously you have filled a great mental storehouse with facts and it is in your periods of laziness — those times when you are loafing, doing nothing [illegible] nothing, that the [illegible] to assemble themselves into a definite pattern, [illegible] up in your mind that rare thing, original idea.

As a matter of fact, original idea is no more than your own correlation of [illegible] concepts of others, a sort of synthetic picture of many [illegible], but it is the measure of your mental development.

Just as a seed must lie in the ground with periods of quiet between watering and cultivation before it suddenly springs into green and beautiful life, so information must rest in the subconscious unstirred at times before it flowers into conscious knowledge.

Crowd the mind too full of effort and you subject yourself to the dangers of mental indigestion.

Take time to be lazy now and then. You will find it a good investment.

BAER FACTS

by Arthur "Bugs" Baer

OVER 10,000 neatly assorted hotel men are holding their convention in New York this week.

Here's hoping they can't get rooms.

These boys call themselves the greeters. Their idea of a good old-fashioned southern hospitality is to give you one of those genial glares that would make a Polar Bear look around for a warmer iceberg.

Times have changed since the old-time boniface held forth in the wayside inn and offered bed and board to man, beast and insect.

Step into any modern hotel lobby, try to sneak a nap in a hard-point chair and observe how the house detective speeds the parking guest.

Hotels are now run strictly for efficiency and its component ingredients. The hotel clerk is just as glad to see you as if you hadn't arrived.

The guest skirmishes up to the desk and gets a Spencerian greeting. The first thing he knows he is shaking hands with a pen.

There was a backward period in our established progress when a round dollar was considered sufficient for the best room and bath in the house.

Now, ten iron spankers is a low price for an eight-hour lease on a bunk and tub.

Hotels nowadays consist of [illegible] rooms, a [illegible]

TRADING GREAT IN STOCKS

Wall Street trading set a 5,000,000-shares-a-day pace today. The early rise was met by heavy profit taking in the afternoon, and prices became sharply mixed. Drops of $1 to $5 a share in active issues were followed by rises of $1 to $12 a share under new leaders.

Some stocks then set new highs while others were making new lows. U. S. Steel for the first time got above $170, with about 25 leaders also setting fresh tops. American Can, Westinghouse, Sears and Sinclair were full favorites.

General Motors issues sold most of the day under Tuesday's close.

Nervousness over possibilities in Thursday's brokers' loan statement was evident.

Wall Street Gossip

SCHIFF Co. has called for redemption Dec. 15, $50,000 par value of its 7 per cent preferred at $110 plus $1.75 accrued and unpaid dividends.

GLIDDEN Co. October sales were $2,735,355, breaking all records. October is last month in the fiscal year and sales for 12 months were $27,406,295, an increase of $3,893,676 over 1927 breaking all sales records.

SOUTH Porto Rico Sugar declared extra dividend of 25 cents.

Gov. Fuller Warns of Danger of Gas From Autos

A warning against the danger of monoxide gas poisoning was issued today from Governor Fuller's office in connection with the Save-a-Life campaign throughout the State.

"Give the carbon monoxide gas an even chance to escape from your surroundings and you are safe. Prevent it's escape and you are in danger. Never run the motor of your auto in a closed garage. Always ope nthe door first," the warning read.

CARPET MILLS ISSUE SHOWS GOOD EARNINGS

Mohawk Carpet Mills, Inc., in the low 40's yields about 6 per cent on the basis of a $2.50 annual dividend. The company's stock was introduced to the public comparatively recently and has held within a relatively narrow range until the last few days. It was marketed by the National City Company, Hornblower & Weeks and Cassatt & Co.

Since incorporation in 1902 the company and its predecessors never have had an unprofitable year. Earnings in the last five years have averaged $2,510,000 annually, while last year they amounted to $2,619,000, equal to $4.36 a share. Net sales in 1927 amounted to $18,367,000, compared with $8,493,000 in 1921.

AMERICAN Seating Co. reports profit for September quarter was $502,552, against net loss of $28,000 in preceding quarter.

NATIONAL Sugar Refining Co. de-clared extra dividend of $1.

NORTH BUTTE READY TO RESUME OPERATIONS

In terminating receivership of North Butte Mining Co., Judge Bourquin of the federal court at Butte, Mont., said: "The company has ousted those who by unwarranted receivership sought its destruction. The receivership was unwarranted in the beginning, was invalid and became valid only by grace of the circuit court of appeals and the company's delay in moving to terminate it." Pres. Paul A. Gow says 200 men will be put to work on the property immediately and this force will be supplemented from time to time.

State Street Notes

GILLETTE hit 115, highest at which the shares have sold since selling "ex" the $1.25 cash dividend and "ex" the 5 per cent stock dividend a fortnight ago.

NORTH BUTTE was turned over in heavy volume. Receivership of the company has been terminated.

MAINE Central's net is holding up well in spite of decreased gross; common dividend should be earned by comfortable margin.

OPERA 'SAMSON' BROADCAST TONIGHT

By FRED TOYE
Radio Editor

THE WORLD'S FIRST woman barber, so far as popular history records, did a poor job of it. The sex has improved little in the tonsorial art in the intervening ages, whether their efforts are accomplished by the edge of a mixing bowl and dressmaking shears or the more devastating horse-clippers of the past generation. Delilah used a razor, or a butcher knife in shearing Samson of his locks, incidentally betraying him into the hands of the Philistines to their own ultimate destruction. Tonight Delilah and her boy friend step out of the veracious pages of Judges XVI 4-31, to reenact the historic event on the stage of the Chicago Auditorium for the instruction and entertainment of the Windy City's Four Thousand opera lovers, and the National Broadcasting Company's Four Million. The Philistines who ultimately tumble to extinction with Samson's final uprooting of the Temple's canvas-marble pillars, are the same hardworking individuals who hammer the anvils in "Trovatore"; go piously to Mass in "Tosca" and "Cavalleria," and perform sundry items of rapine and murder in "Rigoletto," in other words, the opera chorus. We'll hear all about it at 10 through WBZ.

CROSSCUP-PISHON OVER WBET

THE NEWTON Constabulary Band, under the direction of P. C. Newell, together with a novel radio skit, will be the nucleus of an elaborate radio program to be broadcast over Station WBET tonight in aid of the fourth annual boxing carnival to be staged by the Crosscup-Pishon Post, American Legion, as the opening attraction at the New North Station Arena on Saturday. As a means of creating public interest in the features to be presented at this show a radio skit will take tonight's audience on a "make believe" trip to the carnival. Dick "Honeyboy" Finnegan, New England champion, and Andre Routis, world's champion featherweight, are expected to give a battle of words to lend color to the skit tonight. Celia Ecker, local radio favorite, will take part in the skit.

SMITH SPEECH VIBRANT

NEVER was Governor Smith, the Man, more lovable; never was Governor Smith, the Statesman, more impressive; never was Governor Smith, the Leader, more inspiring than in that brief 15-minute talk which he gave over the radio last night. Clearly and convincingly he outlined to the American electorate the importance of a strong minority party, one not content with gaining victory by obstructionism and by pointing to the failures of the majority. Ringingly he called upon citizens of all faiths to remember that the chosen candidate is to be not the president of the Republican party but the President of the United States. Gratefully and humbly he thanked the millions of American voters who expressed their confidence in the platform of the party and in his leadership. Bravely and frankly, though with breaking voice, he admitted that the defeat was disappointing. That sudden little break in the staunch voice must have brought a lump to many a throat. Ironclad indeed is the citizen of no matter what political stamp or religious creed, who failed to receive inspiration from that brief but mighty lesson in citizenship.

MILLIONAIRES

FEATURES on the various chains offer varied programs tonight. WNAC brings the N. R. Millionaires at 9 with the following.

Waltz Over the Waves, Rosas; Can't Yo' Hear Me Callin', Caroline (contralto solo); Down on the Farm (male quartet); Blue Room, from "The Girl Friend"; Juanita (male quartet); The Last Rose of Summer (trumpet solo); Needing You (soprano and tenor duet); selections from "The Only Girl."

BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN

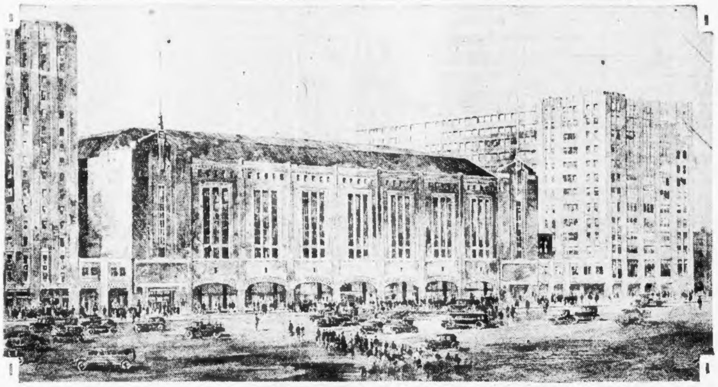
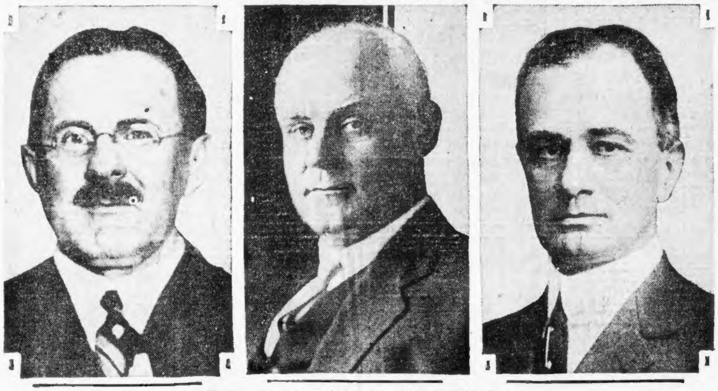
New North Station Convincing Proof of New England's Belief in New England

AN INVESTMENT IN "BOSTON PREFERRED"





Mr. Hannauer's photo copyright by Bachrach; Mr. Perkins' by Notman

The New North Station, fronting on Causeway Street and bounded by Haverhill Street on the east and Nashua Street on the west, is of modern American architecture, solid in proportions and simple in detail. Emphasizing the passenger station level is a row of seven broad arches, behind which lies a 15-foot arcaded sidewalk. Above is a vast auditorium seating 18,000 persons, the largest indoor gathering place in New England. On the right is seen the 13-story North Station Industrial Building, an office and warehouse structure, and on the left a projected hotel and restaurant which will occupy the site of the old "Lowell" depot.

Below are pictures of Homer Loring, who conceived the new station; President George Hannauer, who carried the work to completion, and Thomas Nelson Perkins, Mr. Loring's successor as chairman of the committee, who will act as toastmaster at tonight's dedicatory banquet in the east waiting room.

THE DEDICATION this evening of the new North Station of the Boston & Maine Railroad may be regarded as a curtain raiser to the Fourth New England Conference, which opens its sessions at Portland, Me., tomorrow under the auspices of the New England Council.

As a matter of fact, many of the leaders of New England thought and action who will be present at the dedicatory dinner—among them Governor Brewster of Maine, Governor Spaulding of New Hampshire, Governor Weeks of Vermont and Governor Fuller of our own State, together with President Lawrence of the Council and President George Hannauer of the railroad corporation—will leave for Portland by special train, immediately after the exercises.

The $10,000,000 investment by the Boston & Maine Railroad on the border line between Boston's North and West Ends, which is about to be unveiled, is a brave enterprise, as brave in its way as the New England Council itself, which was conceived at a time when these Six States, distressed by doleful rumors of their present and gloomy predictions of their future, were threatened, at least, with the loss of self-confidence.

Thanks to resolute leadership as it has been revealed in Conference and Council, New England is in a fair way to the realization of that spirit of mutual understanding and helpfulness, that willingness to co-operate, which the six New England Governors, meeting at the Poland Spring House in the early summer of 1925, agreed to be essential before the prevailing atmosphere of doubt and uncertainty could be dispelled and the stage set for a renaissance of trade and industry.

How FARES New England? What ARE conditions? What is the present feeling of her leaders?

The New North Station, offering facilities among the finest in the country, is one answer, but only one.

Other replies to a question of interest and concern to all will be presented at Portland tomorrow and on Friday. Here is one:

> The second annual survey of "migration of industry" shows that in 1927 New England made a gain of 266 industrial units and 7587 employes. The first survey, which covered the year 1926, had shown a gain of 114 units.

The reader is not to assume, on the strength of the above paragraph, that it is the function of the New England Council, or any of its sub-divisions, to extract sunbeams out of cucumbers, find comfort where in truth there is none and, in short, feed this region and its people with statistics calculated to still and quiet their natural anxieties.

WE make this special display of the Council's report on the "migration of industry" because, founded upon fact as it is, it is so completely at odds with reports which have been fed to the country about industrial conditions here and which, finding their way back to our own people, inevitably have a tendency to depress and dishearten, throw cold water on New England enterprise and put a damper on New England ambition.

In the twelve months of the year 1927, only five industrial units moved from New England to points outside.

How many came in?

TWENTY—not counting "branches" of parent establishments elsewhere.

We emphasize this matter of the migration of industry because of an earnest feeling that a little, even a very little, of the "booster" spirit will not be amiss on a date to be marked by the dedication of such a splendid new structure as our North Station.

First among those to whom thanks are due for a demonstration of faith in Boston and Northern New England is Mr. Homer Loring, who last March resigned his place as chairman of the executive committee of the Boston & Maine Railroad after four years of strenuous labor. The new station was the last important feature of the Loring plan of rehabilitation.

Thomas Nelson Perkins, Mr. Loring's successor as chairman of the board, has helped to do a big job in a big way. He will be tonight's toastmaster. His present eminence recalls the fact that Col. Thomas Handasyd Perkins, a brother of his great-grandfather, was the first president of the first raiload in the United States. This was the Granite Railway, built in 1825 at West Quincy.

The man who has carried the Loring plan to completion is President George Hannauer, inventor, banker, organizer and railroad veteran, whose special qualifications as a terminal expert were so generally recognized that before his present connection he was consulted by the Boston & Maine management about the reconstruction of the North Station and East Cambridge yards.

Three hundred and sixty trains a day enter and leave the North Station.

The stream of traffic runs as high as 24,000,000 passengers in a year, 90,000 people on week-days.

The new Boston & Maine has done something handsome—for them and for northern New England.

In particular, the station about to be dedicated is a splendid gift to Boston, a fact which makes it pleasing to recall that city and State governments have co-operated with the railroad in this enterprise every step of the way.

We congratulate the city and the railroad, the architects, the engineers, every man who has had even the smallest part in the making of this gift to Boston and New England.

"The Torch Bearers"

by Herbert Kaufman

Men, whose casual comment is headline news, rose by the hundred, waved and cheered while Nicholas Murray Butler conferred upon Thomas Edison, Henry Ford, Orville Wright, George Eastman, Julius Rosenwald, Charles Schwab and Harvey Firestone the degree of "Supreme Servant to Mankind."

And they, the Master Inventor, the Master Manufacturer, the Master of the Air, the Master of Photography, the Master Merchant, the Steel Master and the Master of Rubber, stood and blushed like bashful schoolboys at commencement, as they received their magnum cum laudes from the University of Action.

The High Captains of Finance and Field Marshals of Industry were all there, and proud to rank as sophomores and freshmen beside these pioneers whose vision and works have so lavishly enriched humanity.

All were there but one. And his towering absence filled every present memory—Rockefeller, the Master of Oil, Distribution and Organization—Rockefeller, the Master Giver of the ages—Rockefeller, the first man to convince society that even a billionaire may prove worthy of his economic hire.

Other generations have had their quota of greatness. The past fitfully glows with genius and philanthropy, but here, in one little gray-haired group, sat the mightiest concentrate of imagination, talent and benevolence that ever a single generation beheld.

The one heritage that Edison, Ford, Wright, Eastman, Rosenwald, Schwab, Firestone and Rockefeller do not wish to leave behind, is the notion that their successors can't do better jobs in their turn and time.

The moneys they have so generously disbursed, colossal as the sums may be—the discoveries they have made, important as they are—must finally prove to civilization but pocket change and minor tools, compared to their examples.

New York Day by Day

by O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, Nov. 14—Long Island as well as fashionable Westchester has hoity-toity establishments for conditioning dogs that offer the grandeur of a de luxe barber shop. One must achieve the Social Register or at least have a relative who plays polo to secure admission.

They occupy especially constructed buildings but to thwart bomb tossers no addresses will be given. Many are as expensive as a magnificent hotel. People who have the absurd notion a plush pillow and a silken monogrammed coverlet mean something in a dog's life are heavy patrons.

Attendants in snow white uniforms even to white shoes add to the whatever you might call it. There are glorified baths where dogs are soaped, scrubbed and flossed up and partitioned solariums where they may rest on luxurious blankets to be dried in the sun.

They are plucked scientifically and their nails are clipped with sterilized instruments. Also electrical massaging machines, exercising runways and in one there are ramps evidently so the dog will not have to walk up or down tiresome steps.

The only value of such nonsense is that expert trainers are employed to teach dogs to heel and to improve their house manners. In a way they are dog colleges where the pup is taken and in about six weeks becomes a polite and excellently behaved animal.

They are scientifically fed from germless aluminum containers and their teeth are cleaned daily. One has a weekly rate of $60. Strangely enough, dogs under such scientific folderol are always developing unheard of maladies while those left to natural bent reach ripe years.

The highly pedigreed canine is insured against death and accident and in case he nips a stranger the owner is protected. In one kennel I visited the attendant said there were seven dogs valued at from $2000 to $8000. But a real dog owner would not think of placing a monetary value on his lowliest mutt.

HE came drifting into a night club after 3 a. m., sitting alone at a ringside table in immaculate splendor. He seemed unconscious of those about him while sipping at his drink. Finally there was a piercing scream and a lady romped for the exit. Other ladies dittoed. Around the gentleman's dinner coat collar and up and down his lapels raced a white mouse. After a time he calmly picked it up, restored it to his pocket and returned to his drink. What do you make of it, Watson?

AND on a big estate near Rosiyn there is a full-grown elephant which is there merely for the amusement of the kiddies. That's taking the big kick out of a circus!

THE New York office boy has a brisk executive manner. He is a snappy dresser, with a worldliness likely to make the most nonchalant stranger fumble his hat. Many executives have been drawn from ranks of office boys. In other cities he is usually just a red-headed, freckle-faced pea shooter, whose grandmother expires when he wants an afternoon off. Here he is given all authority, for which he has no capacity.

YE Olde Time Note: One of New York's well-known travelers still carries a coiling of fire rope with him wherever he goes. In five hotel fires he escaped by leaping out high windows with pantaloons in one hand and his valise in the other, and is a little knee sprung as a result. He takes no more chances.

NEAR Grand Central a man has opened up an office to accommodate those who want packages done up neatly. A professional package tieup, as it were, and he has 11 assistants.

"HOW would you like," writes a renting agent, "to lease a 10-room apartment which has a phone in each room, private elevator, two secret entrances, a private solarium and a private pool."

It doesn't interest me. I couldn't possibly get along without a private mail chute.
